Trio Flogged, Thomas Asks Roosevelt Aid In Crop Strike

Minister, Two Others Tell of Being Beaten Near Earle, Ark.

Sheriff Promises Wide Open Inquiry

Group Went to Funeral of Sharecropper; Ordered to Leave.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., June 16.—An appeal went to President Roosevelt to intervene in the east Arkansas cotton workers' strike today while authorities received reports of three floggings in the area.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, sent the request to Mr. Roosevelt after Miss Willie Sue Blagden, 29, of Memphis, and the Rev. Claude C. Williams, 41, of Little Rock, told of being beaten last night by a band of six men near Earle, Ark.

The third alleged victim, Roy Morelock, 35, Parkin, Ark., sharecropper acting as runner for strike leaders, told Memphis police he was beaten by several men who used their fists and "a small sledge hammer."

Morelock said he was seized by the floggers after a deputy sheriff gave him 15 minutes last night to get out of Earle. He said he escaped and made his way to Memphis late today.

Went to Conduct Funeral.

Miss Blagden and Williams said they went to Earle to conduct the funeral of Frank Weems, colored sharecropper, who they said they heard was beaten to death.

They said they were accosted by the floggers before they completed their mission.

Sheriff Howard Curlin of Crittenden County, in which Earle is located, said a "wide open" investigation would be held if the victims of the reported floggings will appear there and make a formal complaint.

"I have just come back from Earle," Curlin said. "I was told the (Southern Tenant Farmers) Union was holding a funeral for Weems. I saw no evidence of a funeral. There was nothing to indicate Weems was dead."

Appeal to Roosevelt.

Thomas, in his telegram to the President from New York, said:

"You have just come from Arkansas, where you eulogized the State and its leaders, especially Senator Robinson, without reference to peonage, mob law and murder," Thomas said in his telefram from New York.

"I appeal to you, not only as President of the United States, but as head of a great political party, to act in this monstrous perversion of everything decent in the American tradition."

Thomas signed the communication as chairman of the emergency committee for relief of strikers.

Miss Blagden, former social service worker, exhibited a welt-marked back and expressed willingness to return to Earle.

"I'm not afraid to go back," Miss Blagden said. "I would know every one of those men if I saw them again."

Williams, a Presbyterian minister, was asked at Little Rock if he would return and replied:

"I don't think it necessary to commit myself on that."

A Memphis doctor who examined Miss Blagden said she had two severe bruises, 5 inches wide, across her back. She is a daughter of an assistant United States meteorologist at the Weather Bureau here and a sister of George Blagden, Memphis lawyer and one-time winner of the 15-mile Toronto swimming marathon.

The Rev. Mr. Williams said he was lashed 20 times with a heavy leather strap.

"I am bloodshot and black and blue," he said. "The insult is unbearable. I wouldn't have believed my native South could tolerate such conditions."

The minister is vice president of the American Federation of Teachers and Southern representative of the Religious and Labor Foundation.

After beating him, the Rev. Mr. Williams said the floggers ordered him out of the county with the following statement:

"We know you are not here to preach a funeral. You are here to stir up trouble. We are going to stop it. We are dealing mildly now. Get out of it or you will be killed. Get out of Crittenden County and don't ever put your foot in this

Countess Barbara Buys Gem Fortune

Paris, June 16 (U.P.).—Ganna Walska, opera singer and divorced wife of Harold Fowler McCormick, was reported today to have sold her famous Napoleonic emeralds to Countess Haugwitz von Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton, heiress to the Woolworth millions, for 18,000,000 francs ($1,188,000).

Sale of the world-famous jewels, which Napoleon III gave to the Countess Verasis de Castiglione when she was his favorite, reportedly was concluded when the Woolworth heiress came to Paris recently on a shopping tour.

Mme. Walska, at her Chateau de Galluis, near Paris, said curtly she did not wish to discuss the matter.

Farley and Aids Confer Today In Philadelphia

Chairman Discusses Final Details of Convention With Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee, last night left for Philadelphia for a conference with W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the committee, and those in charge of local arrangements for the Democratic National Convention, which opens next Tuesday.

The Philadelphia meeting was intended to put the finishing touches on the arrangements. Farley planned to leave from Philadelphia for New York, where he will witness the Louis-Schmeling fight. He will return to Philadelphia on Friday and remain there until the convention ends.

Before leaving the Capital, Farley went over final details for the convention with President Roosevelt. The national committee will hold its pre-convention meeting at 10 a. m. Monday in Philadelphia.

To Meet at Noon.

Farley will call the convention to order at noon on Tuesday. Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, and probably Gov. George H. Earle will welcome the Democratic delegates to the city and State. After completing a routine program of temporary organization, the convention will recess until Tuesday night, when Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, will deliver the keynote address.

Senate Democratic Leader Joe T. Robinson is slated to be the permanent chairman of the convention and he will deliver his address on Wednesday night, taking charge of the convention thereafter.

Next Thursday, under the tentative arrangements, will be devoted to a discussion and adoption of the platform, if it is ready by that time. Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, slated to be chairman of the Democratic resolutions and platform committee, already has been at work on that document, gathering the views of party leaders here. If the Congressional session permits, he is expected to transfer his activities to Philadelphia on Friday of this week.

The fight over the proposal to change the historic two-thirds rule of Democratic conventions to one requiring a simple majority for a nomination, if such a fight materializes, will take place after Senator Robinson becomes permanent chairman. Senator Bennett C. Clark, of Missouri, whose father, the late Champ Clark, received a majority of the votes of the Baltimore convention in 1912 for the Presidential nomination, but failed to achieve a two-thirds majority, will be chairman of the rules committee recommending the change.

Mack to Nominate Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt probably will be nominated for a second term by John E. Mack, of New York, who placed Mr. Roosevelt's name in nomination at Chicago four years ago. No other nominations for the Presidency are expected. Vice President John N. Garner may not

7 Young G. O. P. Chiefs Get Posts on National Committee

Eight 'Old Guard' Leaders Retain Jobs as Party Set-up Is Revamped at Topeka Rally Attended by Standard Bearers.

By the United Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 16.—Seven fledgling Republican leaders were elevated today to the national executive committee. Eight "Old Guard" leaders retained their posts.

The party organization was revamped at a conference involving Gov. Alf M. Landon, the party's standard bearer; Frank Knox, his running mate; John D. M. Hamilton, Landon's campaign manager, and a score of national committeemen.

Hamilton and Henry P. Fletcher, former national chairman, traded jobs, and Fletcher moved back to general counsel, while Hamilton assumed the managing role for the party.

Plans Kept Secret.

The new committee was understood to have established broadly the main lines of the coming campaign. All plans are kept secret, however. Hamilton, who is 44, said the new executive group is the "youngest ever chosen for the party."

Youngest of the newcomers is Robert Burroughs, of New Hampshire, a 38-year-old national committeeman.

The supposed submergence of rock-bound Eastern leaders in the Cleveland convention apparently was at an end. There was no "house cleaning" today, with J. H. Roraback, of Connecticut, and Ralph Williams, of Oregon, winning vice chairman's jobs, and such stalwarts as Charles Hilles, New York; Harrison Spengler, Iowa; Fletcher and Daniel E. Pomeroy, New Jersey, clinging to key jobs.

Other holdover national committeemen were Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, Rhode Island; Walter S. Hallanan, West Virginia; George A. Ball, Indiana; R. B. Craeger, Texas, and Mrs. Bertha Bauer, Illinois.

Newcomers Listed.

The newcomers were Burroughs, Joseph Martin, jr., Massachusetts; J. Will Taylor, Tennessee; Mrs. John Wyeth, Missouri; Mrs. Horace Sayre, Oklahoma; Ezra Whitla, Idaho, and Earl Warren, California.

Other appointees were Mrs. John E. Hillman, Colorado, and Mrs. Worthing Scranton, of Pennsylvania, as vice chairmen, and C. B. Goodspeed, Chicago, treasurer.

The committee resolved authorization for the employment of a full-time secretary in the pay of the national organization to supplant George McKime, of New Jersey, who had served on an honorary basis.

Hamilton and most of the committeemen made arrangements to fly back to New York tomorrow to attend a finance committee session. Goodspeed will stop at Chicago to establish Landon headquarters.

Guard Is Killed At Richmond; Escape Foiled

Felled by Second Officer, Who Thwarts Break; 5 Convicts Shot.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 16.—A State penitentiary guard frustrated a daring attempt to break jail late today, his hail of machine gun slugs killing a fellow guard, wounding another and critically injuring five convicts.

The guard—C. H. Smith—ended the jail break by riddling a closed truck in which eight convicts were speeding toward the prison gate.

Inside the truck—they had been overpowered—were guards P. D. Bass and R. G. Ream, as well as a colored trusty.

The slugs tore through the truck's walls, killing Bass, 55; injuring Ream, 49, who is expected to recover, and wounding the trusty, Oscar Fields, in the abdomen.

Disorder broke out just before the dinner hour. Prison officials say the eight convicts were in the prison yard back of some shops with a group of other prisoners.

Suddenly, the eight struck down Bass and Ream, tied them hand and foot and shoved them into the truck, standing nearby. They also knocked down Fields when he tried to fight them off and put him in the truck, too.

Then the eight clambered aboard the truck and sped toward the gate. One of them held a 12-pound sledge hammer, which was to be used in smashing the locks, according to officials.

Guard Smith, patrolling the prison wall, saw the speeding truck and called on its driver to stop. It did not. Then Smith looked closer. He opened fire with his machine gun and the convicts tumbled off, clutching their wounds.

Four of them, including the suspected ringleader, D. B. Coleman—serving 20 years for highway robbery—were said to be critically wounded.

Others sent to the prison hospital were T. V. Feazell, serving 35 years for highway robbery; B. Lynn, 45 years for bank robbery; George Ferguson, serving life for murder, and Fields.

Officials sent the other four into solitary confinement. They were Ralph Stonebreaker, serving 58 years for highway robbery; John Price, 41 years for bank robbery; Ed Veal, 45 years for bank robbery, and Deuly Wright, colored, serving life for murder.

The slain guard, a Spanish-American War veteran, is survived by his widow and two children.

Why Did Vandenberg Say 'No'? 'Couldn't Rob Garner of Job'

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, yesterday answered a question that has been perplexing the Nation for a week.

He revealed why he sofiatly refused to become the Republican nominee for Vice President.

Millions of words of speculation have been written on the problem. It has been the subject of hundreds of thousands of conversations. But not one of the speculators even approached the right answer. Here it is, in the Senator's own words, uttered in a Senate debate:

"I just could not stand to come back and look in dear old Jack Garner's face and think that I was to be the one to separate him from his job."

The Republican convention, and particularly the Republican platform, came in for a general panning by Senate Democrats. Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, champion of silver money, spoke for nearly two hours on the money plank adopted by the convention. Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, took the platform apart generally.

The Landon theme song, "Oh, Susannah," was most appropriate, Clark

Bonus in Pocket, Veteran Arrested In Diamond Theft

A World War veteran with his bonus bonds to the sum of $750 in his pocket was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergeant Hugh Jones, of Arlington County police, on a charge of larceny of a diamond ring worth $250 from the office of J. D. Horning at the south end of the Highway Bridge.

The man, who was lodged in the county jail pending a hearing today before County Judge B. M. Hedrick, gave the name of Ernest E. Clarke, of 1015 L street northwest, Washington.

Jones said he was called to the Horning office after Clark, who had come in ostensibly to buy a ring, was alleged to have been seen pocketing a ring by an employe. The detective said he found the man nearby and arrested him. In searching Clark for the ring, which was recovered, Jones said, he found the bonus bonds in his pocket.

League Ready To Free Italy Of Sanctions

51 Nations Are Reported Willing to End Curbs on June 30.

British Cabinet to Vote Today on Stand; France to 'Follow Lead.'

The European Situation

Fifty-one sanctionist nations were reported in virtual agreement to lift the anti-Italian economic siege at the June 30 meeting of the League Assembly at Geneva.

Laborite foes sharply attacked Britain's minister of war on the eve of an anticipated decision to lift sanctions.

Italy, from sources close to Premier Mussolini, sounded a strong note of friendship for Germany.

France to Follow Lead.

By the United Press.

Paris, June 16.—Fifty-one nations which voted sanctions against Italy last October for aggression against Ethiopia were reported in virtual agreement tonight to lift the anti-Italian economic siege at the June 30 meeting of the League Assembly at Geneva.

The League states have decided that continuance of sanctions is futile and dangerous, it was said, in view of the fact that it is too late to help Ethiopia and that Italy is threatening to bolt the League if economic and financial penalties are not removed. Hence the agreement was given strong credence despite lack of unanimity on the subject in several European capitals.

The French government is not prepared to cross the strong pro-sanctionist Communist and Socialist elements which put it in power by advocating or taking the initiative in lifting sanctions, but it is believed that Premier Leon Blum will follow any initiative launched by the British government.

A bill to abolish sanctions was proposed in the chamber tonight by Deputy Edouard Soulier, Rightist. The popular front majority is expected to defeat the measure in order to leave the government with a free hand to negotiate with other powers on the sanctions question.

Premier Benito Mussolini's indirect threat to cast his lot with Germany also has brought Russia into the revisionist camp, and Moscow certainly will be prepared to lift sanctions if Paris and London agree on a common course of action.

This common accord is expected to be agreed upon definitely when Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos meets British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden a few days prior to the League Council meeting Monday.

The French cabinet has not defined its stand on sanctions, but it is almost certain that British opinion, as revealed in Thursday's foreign policy debate in the House of Commons, will be the decisive factor in France's eventual decision.

Wants Stronger League.

However, France is eager to prevent a repetition of land-grabbing in the future and desires that, coincident with the lifting of sanctions, there be some definite reinforcement of the League Covenant and provisions for collective action so that no other colony-hungry country will attempt what Il Duce did.

To obtain that reinforcement, France is prepared to support any plan for reconstruction of the League on a stronger basis.

France is anxious to take the lead and Blum would like his name attached to any reform project. Blum and Delbos believe a necessary prelude must be a thorough discussion with Eden to convert Britain to the French viewpoint of building peace on a powerful League.

Blum and Delbos will make their debut in big League international politics at the forthcoming League meetings.

Francis Sweney Sues to Divorce His Actress Wife

Alleging voluntary separation for five years, Francis Alexander Sweney, architect and cartoonist, filed suit for absolute divorce yesterday in District Supreme Court from his wife, the former Ruth Russell, actress of the stage and the radio.

Sweney, widely known in the world of art, did not ask custody of their seven-year-old son, Don Pettefer Sweney.

His wife is "a fit and proper person" to care for the child, the artist said in the papers he filed.

Attorney Jean Boardman, engaged by Sweney, told the court his client and Miss Russell were married in Fall River, Mass., in 1928, but separated three years later.

Paintings done by Sweney have been exhibited in Eastern cities. His water colors particularly are well known. He has contributed numerous cartoons under the name of "Flix" to humor and collegiate publications.

Miss Russell formerly played with the Rams Head players and later was a member of the cast of the Thomas Herbert stock company, which played at Wardman Park theater. After that she was associated with the Eva La Gallienne company and is now being heard on a radio program.

Tax Conferees Debate New Compromise Plan Providing Steep Rates

Wagner Bill Voted by Senate; House Passes New Guffey Plan

Conferees in Virtual Agreement on Relief; Report Due Today.

By Felix Bruner.

With adjournment in sight, Congress went into high gear yesterday.

The conference committee considering the deficiency appropriation bill, which includes $1,425,000,000 for relief, reached a virtual agreement, with indications that it would report today.

The Senate passed the Wagner housing bill and sent it to the House. It also passed and sent to the House a measure extending the present sugar quota law.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a substitute for the Guffey bituminous coal law recently declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

President Signs Long List.

President Roosevelt signed a long list of bills, including the commodity exchange act and the flood control act.

The report on the deficiency bill, which totals more than $2,370,000,000, awaited the return to Washington of Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, who was attending the Democratic State convention at Norfolk.

The conference committee is expected to report the bill as passed by the Senate, with only a few minor changes. President Roosevelt will be given complete responsibility for the disbursement of the relief funds.

SENATOR ROBERT F. WAGNER.

Night Session Is Held as Chiefs Press for End of Congress.

Levies on Surplus Favor House Scale

Corporate Profits Face Assessments Graded to 30 Per Cent.

By Robert C. Albright.

A new basis for tax compromise, smacking strongly of the steep House rates on undivided corporate profits, held House and Senate tax draftsmen in extended session last night, as leaders applied the final "squeeze" toward adjournment.

Administration pressure for a swift wind-up of the long tax controversy, the only major barrier to adjournment by Saturday, was apparent in hurried conferences throughout the day and the attempt at a show-down last night.

The night session fizzled at 11 p. m. without any definite agreement but with leaders still hopeful for an understanding sometime today. Tax experts were instructed to prepare a new set of alternative tax tables for consideration at another session of the committee this morning.

There is still a remote possibility that conferees will not reach agreement on any bill, although an almost evenly divided Senate conference committee improved House chances of a report satisfactory to the Administration. Senate Majority Leader Joseph B. Robinson is said to have advised conferees, if compromise efforts fail, to report a disagreement.

Out of the maze of proposed compromises that have riven the conference committee, one emerged last night as a center of agreement negotiations.

Provokes Heated Debate.

Put forward merely as a basis for "talk," the proposal was the pivot of heated exchanges between the two groups. But before another 24 hours, it may provide the skeleton structure for the long-awaited compromise.

It provides:

A flat $2,000 corporate tax exemption.

Continuation of corporation income taxes at 15 per cent.

Additional graduated rates on undivided corporate profits, as follows: 5 per cent on the first 20 per cent of undistributed earnings; 12 per cent on the next 20 per cent; 20 per cent on the next 20 per cent, and 30 per cent on all earnings retained over 60 per cent.

Both House and Senate conferees at a late hour were still in disagreement on the plan and further concessions to both groups were expected before an understanding is reached.

House opposition to the plan hinges on its retention of existing taxes, which one conferee said "is like mixing oil and water."

Senate opposition is directed at the graduation in undivided profits taxes. The Senate bill imposes an undistributed earnings tax of only 7 per cent, on top of a 15½ to 18 per cent corporate income tax. The House bill discontinues the corporation income tax, but graduates undivided profits taxes to a maximum of 42½ per cent.

In Touch With President.

Although the President at yesterday's press session said he had scheduled no further conferences with House and Senate tax spokesmen, key Administration men on both House and Senate conference committees are understood to have been in touch with the White House.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, said the Administration will accept whatever the conferees agree to. In another quarter, it was said the President has given his informal approval to the suggested compromise.

"The President never has been arbitrary on the subject," Doughton insisted.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, acting head of the Senate conferees, vigorously denied all talk of a compromise and declared he could oppose to the end anything short of the Senate rates. A secrecy agreement has been reached by conferees and King pointed this out.

Inquest Frees Friend in Death Of Capital Man

Coroner's Jury Decides Carpenter Was Drowned in Chesapeake Bay.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Prince Frederick, Md., June 16.—A verdict of accidental death by drowning after diving into Chesapeake Bay was returned by a Calvert County coroner's jury here tonight in the death of Hugh Beverly Fenderson, 23-year-old Washington carpenter, whose body was found floating in the water yesterday.

The verdict automatically freed the man who was described as Fenderson's best friend, Aubrey R. Stinson, his companion on the ill-fated fishing trip. Stinson, 27, also a Washington carpenter, stared fixedly at the jury as it filed in after a half-hour deliberation.

When Maurice Lusty, foreman of the jury, announced the verdict, the carpenter smiled.

After shaking hands with his attorney, D. Edwards Clark, he rushed with Clark from the courtroom to his pretty wife, who had left the hearing when the jury retired.

"I'm free, I'm free," he shouted, as he rushed toward her.

For a moment her face broke into a smile, then she fainted. Townspeople helped revive her.

At the inquest, which centered around a possible "love motive" furnished investigators by another friend of the dead man, Roy Johns, Washington printer, who had declared he heard Fenderson say he intended to ask Stinson to grant Mrs. Stinson a divorce, only three witnesses appeared.

These were Phillip Castle, Washington business man and owner of Wilburn Beach, 15 miles from here, where the drowning occurred; his wife, Mrs. Marie Castle, and Roland Wilburn, jr., 18-year-old boy who rented the boat which figured in the tragedy.

All testified they believed the death of Fenderson, a former sailor who lived with the Stinsons, was accidental.

"There was something wrong in the boat. I saw the man in the dark shirt fall overboard and the other fellow try to pull him in," asserted Castle, and the same opinion was voiced by his wife.

Young Wilburn concurred in this opinion.

U. S. to Begin Sending Bonus Checks Today

Veterans Flock to Postal Stations to Certify Certificates.

The City of Washington, already flush after a Government pay day, is about to feel the effects of wealth added by the $15,000,000 in bonus bonds to World War veterans.

This morning Treasury checks will be delivered to some 600 men and women in Walter Reed Hospital, Mount Alto Hospital, the Naval Hospital and other governmental institutions, where the bonus bonds were delivered early Monday.

The 600 decided on the spot to have part or all of their $50 bonds converted into negotiable Treasury checks. These checks were ready last night to go out in the first mail this morning.

More to Be Delivered.

Tomorrow morning 7,000 more Treasury checks will have been delivered to veterans in the Washington area.

Approximately that number of veterans out of the 26,000 in this area yesterday and last night flocked to postal offices and other certifying stations to surrender their bonuses for what will amount to cash.

Other thousands are expected to certify their bonds today, tomorrow and Friday.

The first business men to report a boom were those who deal in liquor. They benefited from the checks for odd amounts under $50 which most veterans received with their bonds Monday.

More Substantial Purposes.

But most of the veterans who spent their "small change" checks in this manner were telling waiters and friends that their bonds would be used for more substantial purposes.

Those veterans who last night flocked to the postal substations were, in many cases, accompanied by their wives. The wives, who are at home all day, knew the letter carriers. The carriers, before certifying the bonds, asked the wives to identify their husbands.

When W. T. Wilkinson, superintendent of the H street station at Eighth and H streets northeast, threw open the doors at 6 p. m. yesterday, 300 veterans were standing in line outside.

Twenty-nine carriers who serve the northeast section were on the job to certify bonds. It was the second night they had worked

Veteran, Bonus in Pocket, Pens Good News Home, Dies in Fall

Death followed good fortune and an anticipated reunion with his wife and two children for Guy E. Hines, 48-year-old veteran, who was killed instantly in a five-floor fall down an elevator shaft yesterday, only a few hours after the postman had brought him the bonus bonds that meant an end to domestic loneliness.

Hines, a guard employed by the Soil Conservation Service, was on duty on the fifth floor of the Standard Oil Building at Second street and Constitution avenue northwest. Some of the long night he was at his job he had spent writing a four-page letter to his wife in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

He had been in Washington only about two months, and was living in a room at 2139 I street northwest.

As authorities reconstructed the tragedy, Hines, after writing the letter, walked to the shaft to make a check-up. Apparently he thought the car was on the [illegible] level.

He step[illegible] into [illegible]k void and hurtled to his death in the basement. Another guard discovered his body yesterday morning. The bonus bonds were in his pocket.

His body will be shipped home to his widow.

Ickes Holds Up Steel Contract On Labor Issue

Cites U. S. Board Ruling That Pittsburgh Firm Was Unfair to Men.

By Sidney Olson.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes struck again yesterday at identical bidding, in withholding a $40,086 contract from the Jones and Laughlin Steel Co. of Pittsburgh.

He backed up his decision with a ruling from the National Labor Relations Board, which had found the company guilty of unfair labor practices.

Only the day before, the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans had held the NLRB unconstitutional in an action brought by the board agaist the Jones-Laughlin concern for unfair practices.

Ickes, however, insisted his decision had been reached before the court's ruling had been handed down.

The contract was for 1,438,580 pounds of steel to be used in the Imperial Dam in Arizona. Four companies—Bethelem Steel, Jones & Laughlin, Inland Steel of Chicago, and Carnegie-Illinois of Denver—were the bidders. Bethlehem had been disqualified because of a discrepancy, although all the bids received on March 17 were identical.

The bid included delivery of the steel to the Bureau of Reclamation at the dam site at the head of the All-American Canal on the Colorado River, about 15 miles north of Yuma, Ariz.

Ickes said:

"I am glad to take advantage of a case of identical bidding to throw additional weight behind the Government's effort to obtain and enforce fair treatment of labor.

Square Deal His Policy.

"It has always been a policy of the work-giving agencies under my direction to see that labor gets a square deal.

"It certainly would not be fair for the Government to give consideration to a bid from a company which has demonstrated that it is unwilling to deal fairly with the general public by placing a competitive bid, and in addition that it is unwilling to deal fairly with its own employes."

The NLRB, in the meantime, met to plot a course of action as a result of the New Orleans decision which denied the board the right to force the Jones-Laughlin Co. to rehire a dozen employes at their Aliquippa, Pa., plant.

The board members appeared uneager to appeal the New Orleans decision, handed down by a court previously considered very liberal, to the Supreme Court. It was likely they would wait for a more "clear-cut" decision. They already are involved in seven other cases in circuit courts of appeals.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the New Orleans decision was "very disappointing."

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, said:

"It is characteristic of the judicial autocracy now being created in our country.

"It is time the people and Congress were aroused to the dangers of a judicial oligarchy, governing the Republic through negative action and escaping the responsibilities of affirmative leadership."

In the meantime, the House Rules Committee reported the Walsh-Healey Government contracts bill, one of the session's chief pieces of labor legislation.

The bill, which has been estimated as likely to affect 75 per cent of the industries in the country, has been approved in the Senate. The House Judiciary Committee had amended it to require employers to establish a 40-hour week, an 8-hour day and the payment of prevailing wages to workers producing materials which are bought by the Government in all contracts over $10,000.

The possibility was strong that the bill would appear on the House calendar for consideration late today.

It is not a "must" bill, leaders admitted, but Speaker Bankhead pointed out that since approval by the two House committees it stood a good chance of enactment before the curtain drops on the session soon.

The bill would stop sweatshops, homework and convict labor on all Government-contracted jobs. On al such contracts, no employes could be under 18.

The Secretary of Labor is named as the administrator of the program, which has been called "an indirect NRA."

Landon to Shun 'Front Porch' Campaign in Favor of Vigorous Plea to Nation.

By Franklyn Waltman

SUFFICIENT has happened within the last few days to indicate quite clearly that this year's Presidential campaign will be vigorously and furiously fought from now until next November, with Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican standard bearer, setting the pace.

WALTMAN.

The Landon managers are convinced they can never win by staging an orthodox campaign. As sentimental a thought as a "front porch" campaign may be, as fittingly as that might meet with the desire of many voters to attain peace and quiet, the Landon managers have concluded that it is not a winning card.

This does not necessarily mean that Gov. Landon is going rushing around the country wearing a hay-raker's hat or going in for what Al Smith customarily termed "baloney stunts." Anything of that nature would be for Gov. Landon to step out of character.

But he will make an aggressive campaign, visiting and speaking in every section of the country. He will discuss what he conceives to be the issues of the campaign, earnestly and at length. It will be his purpose to meet as many voters as possible and to let as many of his countrymen see and hear him as he can during the next four months.

He will attack the New Deal unmercifully, not for its objectives and its intentions—those he concedes to be praiseworthy—but for weak and defective administration and for reckless experimentation. The theme of his campaign will be, for the most part, that, while the country has been paying for a full loaf, it has been receiving but a half loaf from the New Deal.

Before the campaign is finished it is probable that Gov. Landon will have zig-zagged across the country several times. Col. Frank Knox, the Vice Presidential candidate, will follow a like course, hurling denunciation in his booming voice at the New Deal and imploring Democrats and Republicans alike to vote for a ticket committed to sanity and soundness.

In the red-haired, dynamic John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, the Landon-Knox ticket has a campaign manager who, so far, has not missed a trick, and he, too, will take to the hustings in a vigorous effort to bring the New Deal to its knees.

These men fully realize that their first task is to instill a fighting spirit into the Republican Party. And this cannot be done through a "front porch campaign." As was clearly revealed at Cleveland, the Republican rank and file is suffering from a defeatist attitude, an inferiority complex. Most of them cannot bring themselves to believe that President Roosevelt can be beaten. The Landon-Knox-Hamilton trio first propose to stir their party followers out of this lethargy. After that the battle will become more intense.

• • • •

And it goes without saying that President Roosevelt and Democratic Chairman James A. Farley will undertake to match blow for blow with their Republican opponents. Necessarily they will let the Republicans set the pace for the fight. They do not propose to stir up sleeping dogs. They favor the status quo, because the existing situation suits them well enough.

The New Deal does not propose to inaugurate any programs between now and election. The President has no proposals, Utopian or otherwise, to spring on the electorate. He and "smiling" Jim Farley know that if the election were tomorrow, victory would come to them by a great margin.

Consequently their strategy is to do nothing that would disturb the present outlook. They will content themselves during the campaign in defending the citadel which they now hold, defending what they have done—the measure of prosperity achieved in the last three years will be their keynote—and in recalling to the country the 11 years of what they describe as Republican "mis-rule" which preceded the depression.

• • • •

Nothing would please Messrs. Roosevelt and Farley more than a quiet, front porch campaign by Gov. Landon. They know that they are on the defensive only to the extent that they are put there by the Republican nominee. But the Kansan and his advisors have no intention of playing the Democratic game—they intend to fight and fight hard. It is their only hope.

One of the most unusual citations in the conferring of an honorary degree ever read was that used when the degree of doctor of laws was bestowed on Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, at Dartmouth College. Senator Glass in the last few years has been honored by the universities and colleges to an unprecedented extent. But none of the previous degrees was conferred in the language used by Dartmouth's president, Ernest Martin Hopkins, who said:

"Son of the Old Dominion—where formerly 'damned Yankee' was held to be a single word—and welcome guest in this college of the North country, in which once the only Democrat of repute was a horse-drawn vehicle, this ceremony may be held emblematic of the lessened partisanships and the greater appreciations which spell the death of sectionalism, an evidence of progress to which your own material service and well-earned prestige have contributed in no small degree."

Eastman's Job Ends as Senate Declines to Act

Co-ordinator at Last Hour Urges Investigation of 7 More Railroads.

By the Associated Press.

Joseph B. Eastman's office of Federal co-ordinator of transportation expired last night when the Senate failed to act on a measure which would have extended the job for a year.

Late in the day, as one of his final acts, Eastman sent to a Senate committee a recommendation that it add seven more railroads to a list of the largest carriers in the country now under investigation.

His suggestions were in a letter to Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Interstate Commerce committee which had recommended that the co-ordinator's place be continued with curtailed powers.

Eastman's office also made public during the day a detailed study which contended railroads could save a large percentage of the more than $1,000,000,000 they expend annually to maintain equipment.

Revival Unlikely.

Leaders in Congress said there was little chance that the measure to extend the co-ordinator's place would be called up again at this session.

In adding to the list of railroads now under scrutiny of the Senate investigation, Eastman said that the inquiry thus far into the Van Sweringen group of railroads indicated that the following four carriers also should be examined:

Chicago Great Western Railroad, Patrick H. Joyce and Luther M. Walker, trustees.

Lehigh and New England Railroad.

Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad, Wilson McCarthy and Henry Swan, trustees.

Western Pacific Railroad Co., T. M. Schumaker and Sidney Erman, trustees.

Scope of Inquiry Broad.

Eastman also said that the affairs of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, L. R. Powell, jr., and Henry W. Anderson, receivers; Boston and Maine Railroad, and Maine Central Railroad Co. should be investigated.

The Senate investigation was ordered about a year ago, and Eastman was asked to select the carriers. The resolution gave the investigators power to look into financing, mergers, consolidation, personnel and records of the railroads or affiliates.

Appointed by President Roosevelt in 1933 to carry out a broad program of improving and co-ordinating railroad, highway, and water transportation, Eastman has seen only a few of his sweeping suggestions materialize.

Although his co-ordinator's office expires, Eastman will retain his place as a member of the I. C. C.

Press Labor Case Appeal Is Argued

New York, June 16 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today heard arguments and reserved decision in a suit brought by the National Labor Relations Board against the Associated Press for allegedly discharging an editorial employe for activities in the American Newspaper Guild, in violation of provisions of the Wagner labor relations act.

Attacking the constitutionality of the Wagner act and upholding the right of the press association to select its personnel in order to preserve the unbiased, impartial news reports demanded of it by its members, John W. Davis, counsel for the Associated Press, declared such a deprivation of rights would be in violation of the due process clause of the fifth amendment.

The Labor Board, through its chief counsel, Charles Fahy, asked the court for an order reinstating Morris Watson, the discharged employe, and enjoining the Associated Press from interfering with organization and bargaining by employes.

"Watson has become the symbol of the right of employes to organize freely," Fahy said. "The Associated Press, by discharging him, struck not at Marris as an employe, but struck at the American Newspaper Guild, and struck also at the right of the editorial employes in the Associated Press to self organization."

Appointment of Davis Confirmed by Senate

It also confirmed Emil Schram, of Illinois, as a director of the Reconstruction Corporation until 1938, and John C. Lehr as United States attorney for the eastern district of Michigan.

Plan to Pension Railroad Aged Called 'Unjust'

D. C. Supreme Court Hears Arguments on Writ Plea by Lines.

By the Associated Press.

The Government's railroad retirement plan was described in the District of Columbia Supreme Court yesterday as "an arbitrary and unconstitutional exercise of a forbidden power."

In a four-hour argument, Emmett E. McInnis, railway attorney, contended that the scheme for pensioning aged employes could not be justified under the commerce, defense or general welfare powers of Congress.

He summed up evidence presented in a three-week trial by lawyers for 131 first-class carriers and 289 lesser railway enterprises. They are seeking an injunction to prevent enforcemetn of the retirement act and its companion revenue measure, which calls for a first tax payment by the railroads of $15,000,000 on July 1.

Charles M. Hay, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, will present arguments for the Government today. Justice Jennings Bailey, presided, has indicated that he will try to pass on the constitutionality of the pension plan within the next two weeks.

McInnis traced the legislative history of the two acts in an effort to show that they were intended as a substitute for teh 1934 retirement law, invalidtaed last year by the Supreme Court.

"The President himself has unmistakably expressed his opinion that these acts are parts of the same legislative scheme," he said. "They merely split the old retirement act into two parts, and neither measure is intelligible without the other."

He argued that the cost of pensions would rise, as more men are retired, from $58,000,000 this year to $200,000,000 in 1950. The money would be raised by a 3½ per cent tax on employes' wages, and an equal levy on railroad payrolls.

"To throw that burden on the railroads, McInnis declared, "would be sheer confiscation of property."

Landon's Ex-Secretary In Race for Governor

Topeka, Kans., June 16 (AP).—Will G. West, former secretary to Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, today filed for the party's nomination for Governor.

West, a McPherson Stockman, is the only Republican candidate to file for this office. Two Democrats, former Gov. Jonathan M. Davis, and Walter Huxman, Hutchinson attorney, have filed.

Davis announced he would support the Townsend old age pension plan.

Suspect, Sought In Inventor's Death, Suicide

Idle Electrician Kills Self in Car as Police Seek to Question Him.

By the United Press.

East Orange, N. J., June 16.—Police Chief C. N. Dell tonight announced that .22-caliber cartridges found on Jean Philip Gerhardt, unemployed electrician, who shot himself to death today, were similar to the exploded shell found near the body of Daniel McFarland Moore, murdered inventor.

Gerhardt, 35, of Staten Island, killed himself just as Police Chief Earl Hoyer, of Middleton Township, approached his automobile in a patch of woods in Middleton.

East Orange police immediately turned their investigation on Gerhardt, whose description tallied with that of a "tall, thin" man who called on Moore, friend of the late Thomas A. Edison, the night before he was shot on the lawn of his home.

Detective Earl McIntire was sent to Middleton this afternoon and reported to Dell the cartridges were similar. He said he was returning with the cartridges and a photograph of Gerhardt.

The photograph will be shown to Beatrice Moore, 25, the inventor's daughter, who refused to allow a stranger to enter the house on the eve of the slaying. Miss Moore reportedly told police the caller was about 35 years old, 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighed 185 pounds and had a medium complexion and was smooth shaven.

August Gerhardt, father of the dead electrician, said his son was 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighed 160 pounds, had a light complexion, brown hair and blue eyes and "wore big shoes."

When Moore's body was found beside the garage of his fashionable home yesterday morning, one of the few clews was a large footprint in the soft dirt. It was made by an 11E shoe. Moore had been shot twice through the head.

Inventor Rebuffed.

William Douglas Moore, brother of the inventor, told police Moore was slain by a rebuffed rival inventor who may have tried to interest him in some device and was turned down. He said:

"The man who came to the house about 8:30 p. m. on the eve of the shooting said he wanted to talk about an invention. Beatrice told him her father wasn't in because she knew he had to get up early to go to Bethlehem to attend the funeral of my father-in-law.

"The man said he would go to see some other friends in the neighborhood and return later, but the funny thing is that Beatrice noticed that all he did was walk up and down in front of the house. She told Early about that. He looked out of the window. He said: 'Oh, that's that Brooklyn electrical bug again.'"

Left Home Sunday.

Gerhardt left his home last Sunday in an automobile after telling his parents he was going to Red Bank, N. J., "to see if I can find a job." He told them he would not be back for several days. His father said he had never known his son to carry a gun.

"He worked for a lot of big concerns in New York, but I don't know if he ever worked for Edison," the elder Gerhardt said. "He had been out of work more than a year and felt pretty bad about it."

Staten Island police records showed that on November, 1933, Gerhardt attempted to asphyxiate himself with gas but that he was discovered by his mother and taken to a hospital.

Gerhardt died today in Riverview Hospital, Red Bank, where he was taken by Chief Hoyer. The policeman said he left the highway to question Gerhardt in the car, when Gerhardt suddenly lifted a rifle and shot himself in the head.

Funeral services for Moore, a brilliant electrician, who held more than 100 patents for various inventions, were to be held in the Colonial Funeral Home in East Orange tonight.

Ex-Monk Denies Rasputin Charges

New York, June 16 (AP).—Sergius Trufanoff, former monk and personal confessor to Czar Nicholas of Russia, denied on the witness stand today a published story that he once tried to seduce a woman in Tsarytsis, Russia, and then had her stripped and dragged through the street tied to a cart.

Other excerpts from the book, Rene Fulop-Miller's "Rasputin: The Holy Devil," depicted him, his counsel said, as a forger, a betrayer of women and "a filthy-mouthed, vicous and disreputable person."

Trufanoff, who is suing the author and publishers of the book for $100,000 damages, smiled as the passages were read and, through an interpreter, declared they were untrue.

In the court room was the woman he married after renouncing the priesthood, and their four children.

Trufanoff said that he was known under the name of Illiadore when he lived in a monastery at Tsarytsis before the revolution, that he had known Rasputin and that he had become convinced Rasputin was a man of evil character. Trufanoff asserted he had been a resident of the United States since 1920.

The trial will continue tomorrow.

Veterans Hasten to Cash Their Bonus Bonds

Postman Thomas B. Kelly assigned to the Northeast Branch Postoffice at Eighth and H streets northeast, had a busy time yesterday. In above photo, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Mathias are identifying William Sojka, veteran seeking to redeem his bonus bonds. Mathias family and Sojka reside at 611 Massachusetts aven ue northeast.

overtime. They will be on the job again tonight and tomorrow night.

Postmaster Vincent C. Burke, whose carriers on Monday delivered bonus bonds to 85 per cent of those who were on the list to receive them, announced that "practically all" the remainder were delivered yesterday.

Few Cases Pending.

"There are a few cases still pending," he said. "For the most part they involve veterans who have had difficulty in being identified. We are advising all of them how to proceed about identification."

Potsmaster Burke announced there would be no more night deliveries of bonds. Those that remain, he said, would be taken out in the regular daily deliveries.

It was announced last night that members of the World War veterans' organizations in the District will celebrate the bonus pay-off Friday night in the auditorium of the National Press Club. The celebration will be sponsored by the Fort Stevens Post of the American Legion.

There will be a three-hour floor show and refreshments. Downtown theaters, night clubs and broadcasting stations have promised to supply entertainers.

Floyd G. Caskey, president of the District's champion drum and bugle corps, is general chairman. He is being assisted by Harry Hooley, past commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and by other members of various veterans' organizations here.

Edward R. Dixon, commander of Government Printing office Post, No. 33, of the local department of the American Legion, yesterday made the following announcement:

"Arrangements have been made with the Postoffice for the certification of bonds held by the 1,057 World War veterans employed in the Government Printing Office.

20 Certifying Officers.

"Details have been completed by the G. P. O. American Legion Post in co-operation with Public Printer Giegengack, himself a member of this legion post and one of the organizers of the American Legion, to have a force of 20 certifying officers in the green room of Harding Hall on Wednesday, June 17, from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m.

"Surveys show that 80 veterans, cashing an average of eight bonds apiece each hour, will cash in approximately $250,000 in this office alone. The men will be released from their duties in relays of 15 minutes each for this purpose. Identification will be made by legion members and the veterans' office identification cards."

The postal substations and other certifying offices will be open from 6 p. m. to 10 p. m. every day until Friday.

The Automobile Merchants Association of New York estimated that 12,500 automobiles, half new and half used, would be sold within the next few weeks to veterans.

From all over the country yesterday came human interest stories growing out of the payment of the bonus.

A 38-year-old colored bellhop in Columbus, Ohio, was excused from jail to go home so that he might sign for his bonus bonds. He had been arrested for nonsupport.

Thomas Hughes, 43, a New York butler, was arrested late Monday on a charge of driving while intoxicated. When $500 bail was demanded, he whipped his packet of bonus bonds out of a pocket and tossed it on the magistrate's desk.

L. A. Baughan, a Richmond (Va.) veteran, returned home from seeing about his bonus bonds to find his loss exceeded his gain. His wife and 5-year-old daughter were gone. He swore out a warrant accusing his wife and a man, Joseph Best, with kidnaping the girl.

Roosevelt Aid Asked in Strike county again for anything in the world."

H. L. Mitchell, secretary of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, sponsors of the strike, said counsel for the union would confer here Friday to "plan a defense of the entire situation."

Mitchell announced the strike several weeks ago, demanding a wage increase from $1 to $1.50 for a ten-hour day. Although he claimed 3,000 cotton choppers answered the call, plantation owners said they have not been inconvenienced. The planters blamed the strike on "outside influences."

A representative of the Department of Justice completed an investigation last week, but his report to Attorney General Cummings has not been made public.

Sharecropper Wins Respite.

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—A plea that his extradition to Forest City, Ark., for trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill "would be tantamount to a death sentence" won a temporary respite today for Sam Bennett, 45-year-old colored sharecropper.

Judge Cornelius J. Harrington, of the criminal court, issued a writ of habeas corpus on petition of Meyer Meyers, attorney for the Workers Right League, holding in abeyance an extradition warrant under which Bennett was to have been taken back to Forest City tomorrow.

Bennett was arrested here several days ago on a fugitive warrant. Assistant State's Attorney A. M. Bradford, of St. Francis County, Ark., who came here following the arrest, said Bennett threatened J. K. Shaifer, St. Francis County plantation owner, with a shotgun when the latter ordered the colored man, a cotton strike sympathizer, to return to work in the fields.

Says Fair Trial Impossible.

In his petition to prevent return of Bennett to Forest City, Attorney Meyers argued that it was "impossible" for the defendant "to obtain a fair trial in a community where the population was prejudiced."

"His very life will be endangered," the attorney pleaded, "if he is forced to return to Arkansas. An order directing that this defendant be extradited to Forest City would be tantamount to a death sentence."

Assistant State's Attorneys Walter L. McCoy and James B. Cunningham, of Cook County, Chicago, opposed the writ on ground Meyers had failed to set up an adequate defense.

Judge Harrington, however, issued the writ, which he made returnable June 30, and ordered Attorney Meyers to file an amendment petition setting up a sufficient defense before June 25.

Unable to post a bond, Bennett was returned to the county jail.

Department to Investigate.

Norman Thomas' telegram requesting President Roosevelt's intervention in the flogging of a young woman and a minister in the Arkansas sharecropper situation was forwarded to the Justice Department for investigation, the White House secretariat explained last night. President Roosevelt was said to have no comment at this time.

Meanwhile, Marvin H. McIntyre, one of the President's secretaries, telegraphed Thomas to this effect. The latter, according to the Associated Press dispatch from New York, asserted that "I hope this investigation will be more fruitful than others ordered by the President."

In connection with the difficulties in Arkansas growing out of the sharecropper problem it was recalled that President Roosevelt, speaking last week at Little Rock, Ark., asserted that "we know that equality of local justice is, alas, not yet an establsihed fact; this also is a goal we must and do seek."

Whether the President in uttering those words had the Arkansas sharecropper situation in mind is not known, but it was significant that this passage in his Little Rock speech was pointed out in official quarters after receipt of Thomas' telegram.

Miss Willie Sue Blagden, the social worker who reported she was flogged, spent several weeks in Washington about two years ago, lecturing at the Washington Open Forum and before other local organizations.

Florida Storm Abates; Heads Toward Bermuda

Jacksonville, Fla., June 16 (AP).—The tropical storm which cut across south Florida early yesterday is moving rapidly up the Atlantic in a northeasterly path toward Bermuda.

The Weather Bureau here said the disturbance virtually dissipated over the northern Bahama Islands last night, but picked up new life in the open water today and headed in the general direction of the British Island of Bermuda.

Observers said the storm is of moderate intensity but they warned Bermuda and vessels in the path of the disturbance to take precautions.

Chief Executive's Son Is Challenged to Run

Boston, June 16 (AP).—State Representative Phillip G. Bowker, Republican, today challenged James Roosevelt, son of the President, to run for Congress, declaring his candidacy would "provide an out and out test of the New Deal."

The district nominall is Republican.

Young Roosevelt, a resident of Brookline, yesterday declined to affirm or deny published reports he might run for the House of Representatives in the Ninth Massachusetts District. The seat now is held by Representative Richard M. Russell (Democrat), of Cambridge.

Jurors Indict Slain Broker's Estranged Wife

She Is Identified in Chicago as Purchaser of Gun; Inquest Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 16.—The estranged wife of Joseph Bolton, jr., 44, slain insurance broker, was charged formally with murdering him in a true bill reported voted by a grand jury today a few minutes after her police guards quoted her as telling them:

"Betty Martin got away with it, why shouldn't I?"

Shortly before the reference to the blonde Mrs. Martin—who was acquitted recently by a jury as temporarily insane when she fatally shot her spouse, Andrew—Mildred Bolton, 40, had viewed her husband's bullet-scarred body.

Dry eyed, officers said, she kissed his forehead, patted his cheek and said:

"My husband."

Claims Mishap.

A gun was still smoking in her hands yesterday when clerks carried the wounded Bolton from his tenth floor office. He had been target for three bullets. Taken by police, his wife insisted it was all a mishap.

She and Bolton were arguing, she said, and a gun appeared from his desk drawer. The gun went off, she added, "but, I didn't touch it."

Assistant State's Attorney Morris Meyers was skeptical, he said, for Bolton was shot twice in the back.

A friend of Bolton, Arthur L. Ladd, testified at an inquest that Mrs. Bolton stabbed her husband so seriously two years ago that he spent ten days in a hospital. A week ago, Ladd asserted, she had tried to attack him with a knife in his office.

Identifies Pistol.

The pistol which killed Bolton was identified by Harold Goldberg, Hammond, Ind., pawnbroker, as one he sold to Mrs. Bolton a few days ago. When Goldberg pointed her out in a police line-up, however, she cried:

"Why, I never saw that man before."

Her answers to other questions were unconventional.

How old was she?

"Oh, it's so long ago I've forgotten; wouldn't you?"

Who was her lawyer?

"Clement Horsefeathers."

The inquest was continued at the prosecutor's request until June 26. Ladd said he thought the altercation might have started when Bolton tried to obtain from his wife papers necessary for him to make application for his bonus.

Just a few minutes before Bolton was shot, Ladd said he told him on the telephone "all hell is popping here."

Weightman Pupils Honor Kiwanians

President Bynum Hinton of the Kiwanis Club and members of the boys' and girls' committees of the organization were given a surprise party yesterday by children of the Weightman School, in which they were lauded for their interest in the school since its foundation in September, 1929. The program was under the direction of Mrs. Beulah J. Drake, the principal. Master of ceremonies was Catherine Cooper.

Mildred Petrey, Hope Howard, Grace Vitality, Marie Donnateilla, Fannie Barbour and Dolores Ryan awarded to Hinton, Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the underprivileged children's committee; Charles W. Pimper, David L. Maxwell and Edwin F. Hill, as well as Fred Parker, international secretary, and Merton S. Heiss, both of Chicago, medals of merit for their assistance and co-operation with children of the school.

A duet was then sung by Charles Ellis and Charles Bright. Mildred Petrey played a piano solo.

City Employes To Face Jurors In Clan Inquiry

Must Swear to Innocence; Pontiac Man Sentenced for 'Evasiveness.'

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 16.—An assistant attorney general, acting on the charge of a former Pontiac police chief that one-third of the city's employes were members of the lack Legion, asked today that all be ready to testify tomorrow before the grand jury investigating numerous reports of night riding terrorism.

The first witness before the grand jury there today was sentenced to 30 days for contempt by Judge George B. Hartrick, presiding, "for being evasive in his answers."

The witness was James E. Bader, a truck driver in the Pontiac park department. Buell A. Doelle, the assistant attorney general, said Bader has admitted he is a major in the Black Legion.

Must Take Oath.

The Pontiac city employes will be required to swear that they are not members of the terrorist organization, city officials announced today as two other communities, Lincoln Park and Highland Park, also took steps to purge their rolls of members of the hooded order. Numerous Detroit and Highland Park city employes already have been dismissed or suspended on suspicion of membership.

The recent arrest in Detroit of two Highland Park firemen and a Pontiac police sergeant on a charge of conspiracy to murder Arthur F. Kingsley, Highland Park newspaper editor, added to the tension created by repeated charges that the Black Legion had reached out for political dominance in those and other nearby communities.

Dean Clings to Story.

Dayton Dean, the Black Legion's executioner in the roadside slaying of Charles A. Poole a month ago, clung today under defense cross-examination to his story of having been sent out with a "death squad" of the ngiht riders to kill Kingsley, whose newspaper was fighting N. Ray Markland in his campaign for re-election as mayor of Highland Park.

Dean asserted he was instructed to slay Kingsley, and that Sergt. Walter Pierce, of the Pontiac police department was to have arranged an alibi for him by pretending Dean was under arrest there at the time.

Pierce and Markland are among the 12 men charged with plotting against Kingsley. Their examination, to determine whether they shall be held for trial, probably will be completed Wednesday.

Cripple Creek, Colo., June 16 (AP).—Gold fever flared in Cripple Creek today on reports of a "big strike" in the American Eagles mine.

J. O. B. Kenner, superintendent of the Winfield Scott Stratton estate, which has an interest in the American Eagles, said "prized black telurrium ore" was found yesterday in the mine.

He said the first samples ran 1,020 ounces of gold, or about $35,000 a ton.

Democrats Pick Governor's Aid In Indiana Race

Fist Fight Marks Parley; Maine and Minnesota Returns Counted.

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, June 16.—In a fiery convention marked by a bitter contest for ballots and one fist fight, M. Clifford Townsend, of Marion, the present lieutenant governor, who had the support of Gov. Paul V. McNutt, was nominated by Indiana Democrats today as their candidate for Governor in November.

Townsend, 51, former school teacher and active in farm organizations, will oppose Raymond S. Springer, 54-year-old Connersville attorney, the Republican nominee. Springer also was the nominee four years ago, losing to Gov. McNutt.

The nomination came on the first ballot after the big Marion County (Indianapolis) delegation had held up the balloting for 45 minutes trying to make up its mind whether to climb on the Townsend band wagon with its 231 votes, which would have been enough to nominate.

In Utter Confusion.

Delegates milled around the floor in utter confusion. When the chairman refused to recognize J. Glynn Ellison, of Gary, chairman of the Lake County delegation, who wanted to change its vote to throw strength to E. Kirk McKinney, former State Home Owners Loan Corporation head and one of the other two candidates, Ellison went to the platform. In the ensuing argument he struck Wayne Cox, State relief administrator, who has been charged by the other candidates with influencing relief officials and workers for Townsend. They were quickly separated and Ellison was hustled off the platform.

The McNutt forces also nominated their choice for Lieutenant Governor, State Senator Henry F. Schricker, of Knox, also on the first ballot. The rest of the State ticket, mostly McNutt supporters, was nominated without opposition and Thomas Taggart, of French Lick Springs, and Mrs. Samuel M. Ralston, widow of the late United States Senator, were re-elected to the National Democratic Committee.

Maine Result Doubtful.

Portland, Me., June 16 (AP).—Two candidates in Maine's primary elections, defeated on the basis of unofficial returns, refused tonight to accept that verdict, while two others indorsed either by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's organization or that of Dr. F. E. Townsend, held nominations.

Four so approved had been rejected by the voters.

Joseph W. Connolly, Democrat, Coughlin-indorsed, defeated narrowly in the First Congressional District in unofficial counts, by the incumbent, Representative Simon M. Hamlin, said he would demand a recount.

Paul F. Slocum, rejected for the Republican nomination to the House of Representatives in the First District, indicated he would run next fall as an independent.

Slocum was one of eight candidates vanquished by James C. Oliver of South Portland, who carried the endorsement of both the Townsend party and the Coughlin group. Oliver was the only Townsend-endorsed contestant to carry off a victory.

Brewster Unopposed.

Blin W. Page, Skowhegan banker-candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, who received the Townsend approbation from Clinton T. Wunder, Eastern manager of the old age pension planners, lost by more than 18,000 votes to Secretary of State Lewis O. Barrows.

The Rev. J. Clarence Leckemby of Pittsfield, personally endorsed by Dr. F. E. Townsend, trailed along with six others behind Clyde H. Smith, executive councillor, for the Second District Republican Congressional nomination.

The incumbent Third District Republican, Ralph O. Brewster, also Townsend-endorsed, had no opposition for renomination. Wallace F. Mabee, jr., former Eastport mayor, won the Third District Democratic nomination.

U. S. Senator Wallace H. White (Republican) and Gov. Louis J. Brann (Democrat), were unopposed for their respective party nominations for United States Senator.

F. Harold Dubord, Democratic national committeeman, had no opposition for his party's gubernatorial nomination.

In the Second Congressional District, Ernest L. McLean, former Augusta Mayor, was the only Democratic candidate for nomination to the National House, although sticker votes bearing the name of A. Raymond Rogers (Republican), of Walterville, appeared on hundreds of Democratic ballots. Rogers was endorsed by the Coughlin group.

The Republican primary vote reached an unofficial total of 120,081, close to the record breaking Republican primary of 1928 when 122,354 ballots were cast.

There was no State-wide Democratic vote total available.

Olson Vote Mounts.

St. Paul, June 16 (AP).—Republicans rejoiced in their biggest primary vote since 1930 with tonight's tabulations of yesterday's primary contest which sped Gov. Floyd B. Olson's hope to enter the United States Senate.

The Governor, seeking his Farmer-Labor Party's endorsement, proved the biggest vote-getter in its lists by defeating Carl Taylor for the Senatorial nomination. In 2,100 of the State's 3,724 precincts he piled up a 100,000 majority. The vote: Olson, 107,706; Taylor, 7,603.

His close political ally, Elmer Benson, whom he named United States Senator on the death of Thomas B. Schall a few months ago, outdistanced another widely known Farmer-Laborite, former Senator Magnus Johnson, essaying a "comeback" in the race for the party's Governorship nomination. The vote in 2,027 precincts: Benson, 78,303; Johnson, 29,426.

Mrs. Schall Losing.

On the count from about half the precincts, the Republicans claimed they would poll about 25,000 more votes than the now dominant Farmer-Labor Party. Congressman Theodore Christianson, in the outstanding Republican fight, defeated the widow of Senator Schall for the Senatorial nomination. The vote from 2,100 precincts was: Christianson, 94,738; Mrs. Schall, 36,018.

Martin Nelson won the Republican Governorship nomination over A. B. Gilbert. In 2,027 precincts the count was Nelson, 109,344; Gilbert, 17,972.

In spite of stirring contests—all of them but the Senatorial race still in doubt—the Democrats failed to approach the other two parties in total vote.

National Democratic Committeeman Joseph Wolf, whose faction was fought by that of Congressman Elmer J. Ryan and Joseph Moonan for party supremacy, claimed victory for his Senate nominee, Patrick Delaney. With 2,100 precincts tabulated, Delaney had 47,346 votes to 24,430 for Beldin H. Loftsgaarden, the Ryan-Moonan entry. Other races on that ticket, however, were unsettled.

The Democratic gubernatorial race grew more tense as E. E. Novak, a Ryan-Moonan man, whittled away a 3,000-vote lead perviously held by Fred Curtis, supported by Wolf. Returns from 2,027 precincts gave Curtis 37,572 and Novak 36,675.

Congressional candidates nominated included Congressman Melvin Maas (Republican) and Howard Y. Williams, third-party advocate (farmer-Labor), in the Fourth District; Walter Newton (Republican), former secretary to Herbert Hoover when the latter was President, and Dewey Johnson (Farmer-Labor), in the Fifth, and Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), in the third.

Va. Democrats Give Roosevelt Their Support

Emotion Overcomes Glass as He Accepts Bill for Renomination.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., June 16.—Virginia Democrats, in a convention surging with enthusiasm, today instructed the State's 22 votes for the renomination of President Roosevelt, commended both national and State administrations and demonstrated vociferously for their State leaders.

In the closing hours the State convention heard Senator Carter Glass, 78-year-old veteran and nominee to succeed himself, express appreciation in a voice husky with emotion, while tears well up in his eyes.

"I raised my right hand to heaven and took an oath to serve my country and maintain its Constitution, which I regard more than I do my life," the Senator said. "I have thought for myself and permitted nobody else to think for me. I have never cast a vote which I would withdraw or for which I would apologize."

Flew From New England.

The upwards of 3,000 delegates rose in their seats to cheer the Senator, who made his first long flight by plane to attend the convention after receiving a degree yesterday at Dartmouth College in New Hampshire. For 40 years prominent in the drafting of State and national Democratic platforms, he headed the committee that drafted the 256-word document adopted today.

An ovation for Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, only announced candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1937, opened the convention and similar demonstrations for Senators Harry F. Byrd and Glass featured its close.

Glass Moved.

Senator Glass was visibly affected when he addressed the convention.

"Allow me to express my allegiance to Democracy," he said, as his voice broke. "I could not better express it than to risk my life flying over land and sea to be here today. I have tried to be a member of the Senate of whom the people of Virginia might be proud."

Referring to the degree conferred upon hm at Dartmouth, he said:

"The college president unwittingly called me a constitutional authority. I was startled."

Later he said he recalled that every bill he voted against because of doubts of constitutionality, "has been declared unconstitutional."

"In the United States Senate I have been a servant of the people of Virgnia, but above that I feel that I am the representative of their intellectual and moral character and I will uphold that as long as I live. I presume that I have been nominated on that record, and I promise you to represent the people of this State in the United States Senate with all the fidelity I can command," he said.

Young Democrats Distribute Roosevelt Busts, for $5 Each

Will Receive 65 Cents on Every One; Davidson to Get 80 Cents.

Replicas of a bronze bust of President Roosevelt, made in 1934 by Jo Davidson, are being distributed by the Young Democratic Clubs of America at $5 apiece, it was learned yesterday.

According to Carl H. Monsees, chairman of the committee in charge, distribution was undertaken by the Young Democrats after they learned that Davidson "considered marketing the bronze through commercial channels."

The Young Democrats decided such a procedure would be undignified and, moreover, "that any profits growing from the sale of this particular idea should go to the friends of the President."

As matters stand, however, Davidson will profit more heavily than the Young Democrats. He will get an 80-cent royalty on each bust.

The Young Democratic Clubs of America will get only 65 cents, part of which will go to the Democratic National Committee. Branches of the Young Democrats that are affiliated with the national group will be allowed a $1.25 discount on each replica. The rest of the $5 is taken up in cost of production and mailing.

Monsees emphaized that the purpose of the venture is not to raise funds, but to make the replicas available to "friends and admirers" of President Roosevelt and to remove the stigma of commercialism from their distribution.

He said that they have no agnets, that they don't use the word "sell" and that no one will be urged to acquire the busts.

"If we were just trying to raise money," he said, "We'd be putting out something for 50 cents or a dollar."

The two originals of the Davidson bronze were made in 1934 for Marvin McIntyre and Marguerite Lehand, two of the President's secretaries.

Pach Associates.

Bust of President Roosevelt by Jo Davidson.

The replicas are about 10 inches high and are made of a metal alloy. About 1,000 have already been distributed. The young Democrats hope eventually to put out 50,000 throughout the country.

The special committee for distribution of the busts consists, in additio nto Monsees, of Stella Akin, Acey Carraway, Edwin A. Halsey, W. Forbes Morgan, J. E. T. O'Connor, Arthur Clarendon Smith, Tyre Taylor, Sumner Welles and Charles W. West.

Vandenberg Explains His 'No'

told the Senate. He intimated that the delegates could not get out of their minds when they adopted the platform such lines from Stephen Foster's lyric as:

"It rained all night de day I left; the wedder it was dry."

"Here we have the model and pattern of the Republican farm plank," said Clark, "With what exquisite precision did Chairman Langworthy and his associates follow the spirit and form of the song in their promises to agriculture."

He quoted another line:

"The sun so hot I froze to death."

"Here," he said, "was plainly the inspiration as well as the factual source and the model of style of the Cleveland plank on the tariff with its naive promise to restore our lost foreign market by further raising of prohibitive tariff walls."

Clark told the Senate that "three long years" of Roosevelt were as nothing to the 12 years of Republican rule which preceded them. During those years, he said, Republicans were guilty "of crimes so treasonable that they would have brought a blush of shame to the brow of Judas Iscariot."

Clark suggested that Senator Borah had been "sold out" by the Landon telegram on the gold standard. Borah interrupted to say:

"If the Republican platform had left out the declaration against further devaluation—as it should have—we would have been in a position to meet any emergencies arising from any future action by France."

He said he believed international stabilization of currency was "almost inconceivable." He said he did not believe it was possible for the world to achieve currency stabilization within a reasonable time.

Thomas said that Landon's stand for a return to the gold standard as soon as possible "means that he is against any further increase in prices, although the country needs higher prices, more money and better times."

"The present price level," he said, "means 50 to 75-cent wheat to Kansas farmers and likewise means 10-cent cotton to the farmers of the South.

He said better times could come only by further devaluation of the dollar as opposed to the Republican pledge against devaluation. He suggested a Democratic plank pledging the party to sound currency "backed by gold and silver."

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, who had announced that he would not attend the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, although he is a delegate, declined to add to his statement. He will attend a medical convention in Cleveland during the Democratic meeting.

Farley Request To Sell Tickets Brings Protests

Acting Boston Postmaster Refuses to Distribute 'Nominator' Cards.

Protests against the manner of distributing "Presidential Nominator Committee" tickets, being sold by the Democratic National Committee in connection with the Roosevelt notification ceremonies at Philadelphia June 27, arose from two sources yesterday.

Representative Halleck (Republican), Indiana, made public a copy of a letter which he said was signed by James A. Farley, Postmaster General and Democratic national chairman, in which a postmaster was asked to dispose of 25 of the tickets at $1 apiece.

From Boston the United Press reported that Acting Postmaster Peter F. Tague had been designated as chairman of a committee in charge of tickets there. The report said that he refused the appointment because of regulations forbidding postmasters from being active in politics.

Protected by Civil Service.

Halleck said that the postmaster who received the letter he made public is head of a fourth class office "specifically protected by the civil service laws from such campaign solicitations." The Boston letter, identical with the one made public by Halleck, was reported to have born a rubber stamp signature of Farley's name.

Halleck charged that "America's 45,000 postoffices are campaign headquarters."

Under the Democratic money raising scheme, everyone who buys a $1 ticket becomes a member of the "Presidential Nominator Committee." The tickets are good for admission to meetings where audiences will listen to radio broadcasts of the nomination ceremonies.

The letter given out by Halleck was dated June 11 and addressed the postmaster as "Dear Friend." It said:

"Mr. James A. Farley has arranged to finance the entire national campaign by selling Presidential Nominator tickets at $1 each in every section of the country. No other contributions will be requested from you during the Presidential campaign.

"As one who has a special interest in the success of President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election, we are forwarding to you an allotment of tickets to sell to friends in order to complete the quota.

"The result of your personal efforts will be acknowledged and appreciated by the national committee.

Allotted 25 Tickets.

"The names of those who have the honor of recording themselves as nominators of President Roosevelt will be forwarded to the national committee at Washington as a recognition of their contribution.

"Will you return a check for the tickets sold at your earliest convenience, as all returns must be made by June 27, the day the President makes his speech of acceptance?.

"Yours for Democratic success,
"JAMES A. FARLEY, Chairman.

"P. S.—Make checks payable to the Democratic National Committee. Mail to Democratic State committee. The national committee has assigned to you 25 tickets."

Blum Says Fate Of Franc Rests On Social Bills

Premier Warns Senate of Deflation If 'New Deal' Program Is Killed.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 16.—Premier Leon Blum warned an excited and critical Senate tonight that forced devaluation might be the answer to failure of his "spending" remedy for France.

He said his plans, embracing legislative provisions for deep-seated social and economic changes, formed the only alternative to increased deflation.

No one, he declared, "envisages such a solution" as devaluation "outside of international arrangements and an agreed and general alignment of moneys."

Shortly before Senate criticism of Blum's program had been climaxed by a noisy dispute with a prominent advocate of devaluation of the franc, Joseph Caillaux, former finance minister.

The dispute, begun when the premier mentioned President Roosevelt's "experiment" in the United States, caused temporary suspension of the usually staid Senate.

At the same time, a continued strike of oil refinery workers, some reports said, threatened to drain defense petroleum resources. It was one of the scattered walkouts which remained in the wake of the ebbing national strike movement.

Aims Are "Democratic."

Blum also declared his program favored "democratic institutions," and added: "I have heard myself compared to Hitler. That is something, I assure you, which I did not expect."

Caillaux, Blum's disputant today, only recently joined the devaluationist movement, which also numbers Charles Rist, the economist, among its converts.

Caillaux jumped up to dispute with Blum after the premier had referred to the Roosevelt record.

"Mr. Roosevelt tried an experiment vaster and deeper than ours," said the premier. "The fact is, he already has begun by raising the purchasing power."

Caillaux interjected: "He first took measures of great importance." (Apparently, he meant devaluation of the dollar.)

Blum retorted: "But Roosevelt worked under less favorable conditions than ours. We want to make a start."

The voices of other Senators drowned them out.

Later, replying to the Senate criticism, Blum appealed for confidence. He asked the Senate to "consider the expectations and hopes which have been placed on the laws we ask you to vote."

"Nobody wants devaluation, including the finance committee," he added. "The return to prosperity which we expect will bring back a healthy budget."

Henri Lemery, the opposition leader, called the new government's plans "a leap into the unknown" as debate was begun on Blum's labor deform measures.

These bills, providing shorter hours, paid vacations, collective labor contracts and other advantages, were rushed through the Chamber of Deputies last week to quell a grave strike situation.

Huge expenditures contemplated by the premier, Lemery charged, will lead to the "ruin" of the franc.

Simultaneously Abel Gardey, spokesman for the Senate finance committee, warned that the Treasury was near to its borrowing limit, "while needs are increasing."

A drop in the Bank of France gold reserves to 56,000,000,000 francs ($3,696,000,000), he said, compelled consideration of "the minimum level essential to the national defense needs."

Warnings in Spain.

Madrid, June 16 (AP).—Spanish Rightists, denouncing the government for failure to restore order, warned tonight during a stormy Parliamentary session that the army is "becoming increasingly impatient."

Jose Maria Gil Robles, former minister of war, cited a long list of disorders to support his contention the Left is "impotent to maintain order and is leading Spain into ruin."

The Rightist leader said 269 persons had been killed, and 1,287 wounded since the February elections, with 261 churches and convents fired and 69 political centers destroyed.

Spain, he declared, is getting a reputation abroad as a "dangerous place to travel."

Several Leftist deputies climbed over their seats, swinging fists, when Jose Calvo Sotelo, former minister of finance, asserted the army was "becoming increasingly impatient, and the government will be responsible if something happens."

Ushers prevented the Leftist deputies from reaching the Rightist benches.

Calvo Sotelo said the army "has no thought of restoring the monarchy, as many Leftists are charging, but its patience with the existing order is about exhausted."

Unless "drastic measures" were taken to suppress terrorism, he said, the extremists would seize power.

Strike in Belgium.

Brussels, June 16 (AP).—Angry Belgian strikers, threatening to burn trolleys, paralyzed street car service in Liege tonight.

Mounted police charged with drawn sabers to disperse groups of rowdies during the day.

Police arrested 29 brawlers at Liege, and there were reports that seven foreign agitators also were placed in jail. Gendarme reinforcements were dispatched from Brussels by special train to the nerve centers of the Charleroi area.

Although officials stated the country was calm, it became apparent a menacing situation had been created by the unruly elements among 170,000 strikers.

Communist agitators were reported active in the important industrial region about Charleroi.

Regular army units were mobilized to keep normal public services functioning and the Governor of Liege, fortified city near the German frontier, prohibited street assemblies.

Death Trails Fortune

Above is Guy E. Hines, who was killed in a fall down an elevator shaft a few hours after he had received his bonus bonds. A guard employed by the Soil Conservation Service, he had just finished writing his wife (lower photo) at Council Bluffs, Iowa, that the bonus would make it possible for her and their children to come to Washington and live with him, when the accident occurred.

China Civil War To Start Soon, British Report

Central Troops Expected to Win and Enhance Prestige in South.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Canton, June 16.—Civil war in China will start within a fortnight when Kwangsi Province troops of the commands of Li Tsung-Jen and Pai Tsung-Hsi attempt to cut their way northward to Hankow, British intelligence reports indicated tonight.

Li and Pai have carried their quarrel with Generalissimo Chiang Kaishek, chief of the central China government in Nanking, too far to retreat now, British observers in Kwangsi reported, and feel that they must attack or be crushed. The British feel that the southern movement is not likely to be successful, unless there is an unforeseen break, and they believe that the central government will emerge from the crisis with enhanced presitige in South China and the Yangtse Valley, but that it will have to tolerate a consolidation of Japanese influence in the northern provinces.

It was anticipated that the Canton war-lord, Gen. Chen Chi-Tang, will confine his support of the northern expedition to guarded verbal declarations and will not let any of his own troops venture outside his own provincial frontiers. The British did not share the opinion of some other foreigners that Chen would co-operate whole-heartedly in the attack.

Meanwhile additional war munitions were streaming into Kwangsi from Japan while a number of former officers in the Japanese army reportedly were joining the columns which already have started north. There was no indication, however, that the Japanese army of government was giving any official support to the movement.

Two Arabs Are Killed In Clash With British

Jerusalem, June 16 (Palcor).—Two Arabs were killed today in a clash between British troops and a band of terrorists. The deaths brought the total of known Arab dead to 54 since the Holy Land's newest disorders began. The thirtieth Jewish victim, Jacob Gerson, who was shot from ambush outside Jerusalem last Sunday, died today.

Tension was heightened by the approach of tomorrow's anniversary of the execution of Arabs convicted of murder in the 1929 anti-Jewish riot. Military guards replaced police in Jaffa and other Arab strongholds to guard against disorders.

Daughter for Berlins.

New York, June 16 (AP).—Doctors Hospital announced early today that an eight-pound, two-ounce baby girl was born to Mrs. Irving Berlin, wife of the song writer. The hospital said both the baby and the mother, the former Ellin MacKay, were "doing very nicely."

Landon Songs Cause a 'Crisis' At Club Session

Monarch's Maestro Spurns Plea for 'Oh, Susannah,' Wards Off Politics.

Demands for two Landon campaign songs—"Oh, Susannah" and "Three Long Years"—nearly disrupted the non-political character of the annual banquet of the National Monarch Clubs at the Willard Hotel last night.

The songs were requested during the community singing at the banquet, the closing event in the club's annual two-day convention here. But the diplomatic song leader ignored them, and, with a few gentle digs at the New Deal, the national service organization resumed its non-partisan role.

Earlier in the day Charles F. Phillips, a Philadelphia attorney, was re-elected national president. Other officers chosen are William E. Carver, Syracuse, vice president; H. H. Hirzel, Wilmington, treasurer, and Dr. Charles H. Rominger, Bethlehem, Pa., trustee.

At the same meeting the Monarchs voted to wage a vigorous campaign to "adopt the youth problem." The program called in part for the establishment of scholarships to encourage young mento enter politics.

For its work in finding employment for 35 orphans in this year's high school graduating class, the Durham (N. C.) Club received the Monarch's community service award. One of two groups receiving honorable mention was the Richmond (Va.) Club.

Clarence R. Ahalt, of Washington, first national president, received the annual golf prize. The wards were made at last night's banquet, at which Frank Campbell, of Washington, presided. More than 200 Monarchs, including their wives, were present. The convention ended with a dance.

50-Year Delusion Ended; Tailor, 80, Becomes a Citizen

For more than 50 years, Frank J. Kouba, 80, a civilian tailor at Fort Washington, Md., thought he was a citizen of the United States.

So sure was Kouba of his citizenship he even voted once during his 16 years residence in Baltimore.

Recently, while discussing the matter with friends, he had a sad awakening: the papers he had taken out when he first arrived in this country were only preliminary documents. He still was a citizen of his native Bohemia, now Czechoslovakia.

Yesterday, however, Kouba received his assurance from the Federal Government that he is now a son of Old Glory. The tailor was one of a class of 12 persons who received naturalization papers in the Prince Georges County circuit court.

Others who were naturalized are: Albien Krewatch of Hyattsville, British by birth; Albert Wienecke of Ardmore, Md., German birth; Albert Behnke, Beltsville, Md., German; Robert Gardiner Patterson Miller, Oxon Hill, British; Erwin Carl Haberer, Berwyn, German; Rose Shapiro, Mt. Rainier, Polish; Richard Douglas Hodge, Mt. Rainier, British; Emily Eccles, Beltsville, British; Rose Anne Noonan Mastin, Mt. Rainier, British; John Paulos Nichols, Beltsville, Turkish; and Rudolph Becker, Hyattsville, German.

Field to Be Named For Col. Turner

The new still incomplete aviation field at the Marine Barracks at Quantico wil be named Turner Field in honor of the late Col. Thomas C. Turner, one of the Marines' outstanding fliers.

Col. Turner, who received the Distinguished Flying Cros in 1927 for what was then a record long distance hop to Santo Domingo, died in a crash on October 28, 1931, in Haiti.

Although part of the field is being used by the Marine planes and four modern hangars have been erected, considerable work still has to be done before the field wil be available daily in all kinds of weather.

Crippled Child Survey Report Made to Board

Progress by WPA Workers Disclosed at Meeting of Society Unit.

Progress in the Washington crippled children survey being conducted by five WPA workers was reported yesterday at a board meting of the Crippled Childrens' Society of the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, society preisdent, officiated at the meeting. Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, a member of the board, was present. The session was held in Weightman School, Twenty-third and M streets northwest.

Miss Mary Radford, executive secretary, announced one of the WPA case workers yesterday discovered a disabled girl, 11 years old, who never has received medical treatment. One hand has been useless since birth.

"Although the survey has disclosed many children who are not receiving adequate attention," said Miss Radford, "this is the first case in which we have found crippled a boy or girl who has received no treatment whatever."

The girl, who lives in the northeast section, is one of six children. Their mother is dead and the father is employed on a WPA project.

Venezuela Troops Use Knives, Rout Strikers

Maracaibo, Venezuela, June 16 (AP). Soldiers, using their long-bladed machetes as clubs, broke up a succession of strikers' gatherings today.

No serious injuries were reported. It was said the troops were using the flats of the heavy knives with care but were strictly prohibiting any large assemblages of people.

With the workers in the great lake Maracaibo oil region out on strike and with longshoremen and other laborers joining them, the situation was regarded as acute. Food supplies dwindled for, although there were seven ships in the harbor, no one would unload the cargoes they carried.

The government, taking extra precautions against the spread of trouble, sent approximately 700 reserve troops here from Caracas and Trujillo.

Farley Off to Philadelphia

be renominated until Saturday morning.

The climax of the convention will come Saturday night of next week when President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner will journey to Philadelphia to accept their nominations in an open air meeting attended by approximately 100,000 persons. Simultaneously, hundreds of similar meetings of Democrats will be held throughout the country to hear the Roosevelt-Garner speeches.

Mr. Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday admitted he had an engagement in Philadelphia Saturday a week, but when asked why he was going to the Pennsylvania metropolis, he laughed loudly and asserted that his interviewer had caught him on that question.

Silent on Campaign Plans.

The President declined to discuss campaign plans. He said that aside from the Philadelphia engagement, his schedule called only for a visit to the Shenandoah National Park on July 3 and a speech at Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson, on July 4.

He will go from the latter address to Richmond and board the Potomac, his yacht, for a cruise down the James River during which he intends to visit several friends of long standing, including Richard Crane, of Westover. Mr. Roosevelt said that after his stop in Philadelphia next week he might go to Hyde Park for several days to visit his mother, who recently was injured in a fall. He explained that his mother was able to walk again.

Philadelphia, June 16 (AP).—Philadelphia Democrats who boasted a big, new convention hall when they sold the city to the party's national committee last January, found it woefully small today.

Those in charge of preparations for the national convention, which opens Tuesday, announced that "the crowd could move into Philadelphia today and find the city ready for them," but admitted one problem—ticket demand—was unsolved, and likely will remain that way.

Local party leaders were doing the worrying as constituents beseiged them for pasteboards to get a glimpse of the big Democratic show in this steadfastly Republican city. Huge as the $5,300,000 auditoriumis — with seats for about 15,000—it looked relatively tinier by the hour as demands piled up.

The national committee's representatives estimated ticket requests at 300,000. Charles N. Christman, director of the municipal auditorium, made the same reckoning.

Frank L. Devine, head of the chamber of commerce tourist and convention bureau, said, "We expect approximately 40,000' 'permanent' visitors in town during the week.

"If a visitor arrives here without having arranged for hotel accommodations and applies to a hotel that is filled it will communicate with the headquarters and they will find accommodations for the applicant."

Neurologist's Wife Awarded Alimony

New York, June 16 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenman ruled today that Mrs. Elizabeth L. Cattanach is entitled to a separation from Dr. George S. Cattanch, neurologist, but set forth that Dr. Cattanach's first wife and child deserve the "most consideration" in the case.

Mrs. Cattanach, suing for separation, charged her husband, whom she married March 18, 1933, in Washingotn, D. C., had abandoned her to return to his first wife, Ruth Gardiner Cattanach. Justice Rosenman said the testimony did not support this and other allegations. He awarded alimony of $5 a week.

"The conduct of each of the parties in entering into this marriage is equally undeserving of sympathy," he said.

"The plaintiff was the conscious motivating cause of the defendant's putting aside his first wife and child. She knew of his limited means and used her own ndependent funds as an inducement for the defendants' conduct."

The first Mrs. Cattanch is suing the second for $100,000 damages in a slander action growing out of the situation.

District Airport Group to Meet

An early meeting of the District Airport Commission, possibly today or tomorrow, was forecast yesterday upon the return to Washington of Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, leading House member.

Although appointed more than a month ago, the commission has held only one meeting. A sub-committee instructed to suggest a program for summer and fall has been waiting almost three weeks to make its recommendations.

The delay has been attributed to the occupation of Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, the chairman, with the tax bill and the absence of members of the commission from time to time.

At its next meeting the commission is expected to name a subcommittee to carry on an investigation during the summer and fall.

Takoma Park Tax Rate Stays At 95c Level

Council's Adoption of New Budget Is Assailed by Taxpayers.

Takoma Park will have a town tax rate of 95 cents per $100 assessed valuation for the fiscal year starting July 1. This was assured when the mayor and town council formally adopted their tentative budget after it had been bitterly assailed during a four-hour hearing Monday night by local taxpayers.

The hearing on the budget, first in the town's history, resolved itself into a stormy session of bickering that lasted until after midnight, but did not alter the decision of the town council to maintain the 95-cent tax rate which prevailed last year.

Opposition to the proposed budget was led by J. Bond Smith, president of the Young Men's Democratic Club, who urged that the items be pared sufficiently to permit a reduction of the tax rate to 85 cents. He declared that the highest tax rate of any other Montgomery County municipality is 60 cents and compared the Takoma Park budget with that of Hyattsville, where the rate is 25 cents.

Duplication of taxes was charged against items of $7,200 for the town police force, $360 for a town building inspector, $300 for electrical inspector and -75 for town assessors, all of which Smith declared were services that would be provided by the county government. F. Byrne Austin declared that Takoma Park pays more than -104,000 annually in county taxes and is entitled to all county services in return.

Appropriation of $10,900 for street maintenance was assailed because the work to be handled was not recited and no new construction is contemplated. An item of $6,600 for ash, trash and garbage collection was assailed as too high compared to Hyattsville's appropriation of $2,800 for this service.

Several clashes accurred between Smith, Dr. Llewellyn Jordan and Austin, attacking the budget, and Mayor John R. Adams and members of the council. The meeting was thrown into an uproar when Corporation Counsel Donald D. Lamond, answering charges that his salary of $600 yearly was excessive, denounced the Young Men's Democratic Club for abusing the council and playing "partisan politics."

Other items assailed as too high were $2,700 salary for the town clerk and treasurer, $450 for office supplies and telephones, $175 for registration and election expense and $200 for printing and postage.

The lengthy hearing failed to move hte council and the 95 cent tax rate and the tentative budget was ratified by unanimous vote. Councilman Millward C. Taft was not present.

In a short business meeting at the close of the hearing the council voted to reduce assessments on property owned by R. L. Houston Jones from $4,000 to $3,000; William H. Hutton from $3,500 to $2,900; Heber H. Votaw from $2,750 to $2,500 and T. M. Frimple from $2,750 to $2,400.

The council also appointed Edward Steers as an additional dog catcher for the town, announced the opening of the Takoma playgrounds for the summer under the general supervision of Crescent J. Bride, and received letters from seveal residents requesting street improvements.

Zoo Elephant Runs Wild, Gores Keeper to Death

San Francisco, June 16 (AP).—Trumpeting wildly, a six-ton bull elephant attacked and gored its keeper, Edward Brown, 45, to death at Fleishhacker zoo here today.

Fellow zoo attendants made futile attempts to prevent the enraged beast from thrusting its single, four-foot tusk into its victim.

Garbage Plant Turned Down After Hearing

200 Oppose Plan, Only One Approves It Before Montgomery Board.

Application of J. F. Conrad, of Washington, for permission to establish a garbage disposal incinerator at Chevy Chase Lake was denied yesterday by the Montgomery County Commissioners.

The denial followed a hearing on the application Monday night in the Bethesda County Building when nearly 200 local residents appeared to oppose the plant, while a lone citizen appeared in its favor. The plant also was opposed by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Hugh M. Frampton, of Drummond, counsel for Conrad, told the hearing the proposal was the only economical means of closing objectional daumps in the suburban sections of the county. He added that an incinerator offers the most efficient and modern way of disposing of trash.

Frank M. Heath, retired Army sergeant, of Silver Spring, spoke in favor of the incinerator. It was brought out that the Capital Transit Co. had announced it would lease the powerhouse for the incinerator only if the public approved the project.

The opposition was led by Washington I. Cleveland, president of the Montgomery County Civic Federation and the Kensington Chamber of Commerce, who introduced numerous county residents, officials of civic organizations and business leaders who opposed the incinerator, and read letters from many others.

A continuous stream of opponents of the plant appeared before the commissioners and was halted only when Curtis Walker, of Chevy Chase, on eof the opponents of the project, sought to learn if there were any citizens who were in favor of the plant other than Heath. When it developed that there were no other supporters, the hearing was adjourned.

Among civic organization officials appearing against the plant were Samuel E. Stonebraker, former president of the Bethseda Chamber of Commerce; C. D. Bohannon, Chevy Chase View Citizens Association; Mason B. Leming, North Chevy Chase Citizens Association; Mrs. E. H. Hamilton, Chevy Chase Women's Club; Harry M. Martin, Kensington Chamber of Commerce; Frank Young, Citizens Committee of Martin's Addition; Thomas W. Perry, Citizens Committee of Section 3, Chevy Chase, and Karl Lesh, Citizens Committee of Section 5, Chevy Chase.

Letters of opposition were read from State Senator Stedman Prescott and Joseph A. Cantrel, member of the House of Delegates.

Federal Officers Seize 2 in Arson

A Virginia mountain feud over occupancy of a house which resulted in the burning of the Federally owned property was disclosed yesterday when J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, announced the arrest of two men.

Charles Herbert Frazier, 24, is charged with arson and Noah Herring is accused of conspiring with him to set fire to the home of John Wesley Morris in Shenandoah National Park. The house was destroyed June 2, jeopardizing the lives of nine members of the Morris family.

Morris was custodian of the property, which was recently acquired by the Government.

"Investigation has indicated," said Hoover, "that Herring resented the action of the Federal Government in permitting Morris to reside in the Shenandoah National Park on property which had been condemned and taken from a relative of Herring."

Frazier was arrested near Simmons Gap, Va., last Friday and is being held in jail at Harrisonburg in default of $2,500 bond. Herring was seized Saturday. A hearing will be held Friday before the U. S. Commissioner at Harrisonburg.

Exercises End Public School Activity Today

Commencements All Over After High School Graduations Tonight.

Graduation exercises in Washington's junior and senior high schools yesterday and today bring the public school activities for the year to a close.

For grade boys and girls and high school undergraduates today is "last day." Classes will meet briefly for turning in books and distribution of report cards. More than 80,000 children—all who are not graduating from junior or senior high school—hope these reports will be promotion cards.

With the exception of Roosevelt, which had exercises in its stadium yesterday afternoon, all white senior high schools will have commencement today, Western this afternoon and Central, McKinley and Eastern tonight. Dunbar High School had its graduation last night, while the other colored senior high schools, Armstrong and Cardozo will have exercises tonight.

Mary Powell Presides.

Six white and three colored junior high classes were graduated yesterday. Five white and one colored schools will have theirs today.

Mary Powell, president of the graduating class, presided at Eliot Junior High exercises yesterday. In addition to her greetings there were commencement talks on "Things to Remember" by six other members of the class, Archer Overby, Alice Sudenga, Amelia Petmezas, Muriel Goodman, Bessie Engel and William Goldenzweig. John F. Brougher, principal, presented diplomas.

At Hine's exercises last night Jere J. Crane, first assistant superintendent of scholos, was presiding officer. William Boswell, president of the student council, gave the address of welcome, Joseph Smiroldo gave the class history, and John Spielman was valedictorian.

Dr. Kramer Honored.

Jefferson dedicated its program to Dr. S. E. Kramer, late first assistant superintendent of schools, who died suddenly last Thursday, "whose interest in children's health and Southwest Washington will ever be a cherished memory." Birch E. Bayh, head of the department of health and physical education, was presiding officer. Samuel B. Clements, class president, gave the address of welcome. Florence Litman was valedictorian.

Miss Jessie LaSalle, assistant superintendent, was presiding officer at Macfarland's program. Dorothy Noon, Elizabeth Rogers, William Warner, Gordon Pool and Mabel Klebold gave commencement talks.

John K. Cunningham, member of the District of Columbia bar, gave the commencement address at Langley Junior High last night. He was introduced by Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, in charge of elementary schools. Frederick L. Bach was salutatorian, and Mina F. Brown was valedictorian.

Pupils Stage Skit.

Taft Junior High graduates received their diplomas last night from George M. Whitwell, member of the board of education. Walton Harrison, president of the class, made the address of welcome. A skit, explaining co-curricular activities carried on in the school was, presented under the direction of Shirley Patterson.

Exercises at Alice eal, Gordon, Paul, Powell and Stuart Junior Highs are scheduled for 2 p. m. today.

Randall Junior High (colored) will also have its graduation program today. Mrs. William C. McNeil, member of the board of education, presided at a program yesterday afternoon in Francis Junior High (colored) and John H. Wilson, also a member of the school board, had charge of exercises in Garnett-Patterson School (colored.

Child Taken to Hospital After Drinking Gasoline

A 13-month-old child was in a serious condition at Gallinger Hospital last night as the result of drinking an undetermined quantity of gasoline.

The child, Norman Green, of Greater Capitol Heights, Md., was brought here by his mother, Marie Green. She had discovered the child drinking the liquid from a bottle used by her husband to prime the engine of his truck.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gives Speech In Indianapolis

U. S. Homestead Projects Subject of Talk by First Lady.

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, June 16.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight gave her interpretation of the psychological reaction of human nature "in suddenly getting something when one has never had much."

She concluded her day's program—which was begun at 5 a. m. and included a 163-mile tour of the Southern Illinois mining district—with an address here on the Government's homestead projects.

She told her audience of several hundred about her personal interests and experiences in the initial homestead project at Reedsville, W. Va.

Settlers Wanted Cellars.

"One curious thing about human nature—and I've had long years of experience in dealing with human nature—is that when someone who has never had much suddenly begins to get something, one always wants what one has dreamed about."

Thus it was, she said, that the first settlers on the west Virginia homestead project wanted cellars with their portable houses.

"They had dreamed about having cellars," she said.

Another curious thing, she continued, is that there is a tendency "to grab all one can and to care little about co-operating with one's neighbor."

This, she said, at first discouraged those in charge of the homestead projects.

"But I said if you wait, you will see that as these people gain in security, they will become co-operative."

Arrives by Automobile.

Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by her personal secretary, Mrs. M. T. Scheider, arrived by automobile from Grayville, Ill., to be the guest of Gov. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt soon after the Indiana Democrats had adjourned their State convention.

Told that they had had a rousing convention—including a fist fight on the platform—she said:

"That's grand. But I didn't come here to discuss politics."

She will be the principal speaker tomorrow at Purdue University at Lafayette, where a science and leadership institute is being held. After visiting the Purdue housing research project, she and Mrs. Scheider will entrain for Hyde Park, N. Y.

End of Sanctions Indicated

manister of war from two sides today, the eve of an anticipated formal decision to lift sanctions from Italy.

A peer and a member of Commons used sharp language to protest Secretary Alfred Duff Cooper's statement of yesterday that "it is the duty of those in authority to frighten the people of this country out of their wits."

Lord Ponsonby, the labor peer, told a peace rally Duff Cooper should be confined as "a deliberate, dangerous and disgraceful scaremonger." Later, Emanuel Shinwell, the Laborite who ousted Ramray MacDonald from his Seaham Harbor seat at the last general election, asked Commons whether the war secretary should not quit "being a bogey man."

Duff Cooper replied acidly: "It might be just as well for labor to decide whether it intends to support or retard army recruitments."

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, an informed source stated, will announce in Commons Thursday that Britain is ready to lift sanctions if the rest of the "sactionist" nations agree.

That policy, already reported decided upon, is expected to receive the cabinet's formal stamp of approval tomorrow.

To justify freeing Italy from the economic and financial structures which resulted from her Ethiopian invasion, it will be stated simply that sanctions have failed.

Britain, furthermore, is prepared for a complete lifting of sanctions, it was made known authoritatively. The government considers useless any abandonment in part.

If the British view is backed up collectively at Geneva late this month, the way will be open not only for resumption of trade with Italy, but also for loans.

Italy 'Courts' Reich.

Rome, June 16 (AP).—Italy, from sources close to Premier Benito Mussolini, sounded a strong note of friendship for Germany today.

While the Reich's ambassador, Ulrich von Hassell, was arriving to acquaint Il Duce with details of his recent conversation with Adolf Hitler, Virginio Gayda asserted Germany, throughout the Ethiopian war, "manifested sincerity and political friendship for Italy."

Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, is fascism's most authoritative newspaper commentator.

Usually well-informed sources predicted an Italo-German economic conference in Rome would be held shortly. Danubian accords may be considered, they said.

Some diplomatic observers saw in the leaning toward Germany a move to force France to follow Britain's evident trend toward the lifting of sanctions.

Others, however, considered it a part of frequent Italo-German conversations leading to a possible central European line-up in case Italy leaves the League of Nations.

It was reported, however, no definite agreement had been reacned.

Gayda said Italy "takes full note" of Germany's "free and realistic attitude" toward efforts of the sanctionist bloc.

The Reich, he added, recognized Italy's right to "a life worthy of her dignity and quality."

Youngest Veteran To Receive Bonus Is RFC Employe

Probably the youngest Washington veteran to receive a war bonus was Ralph Krisch, 34-year-old RFC accountant, who went to war at the age of 15.

Kirsch, born in January, 1902, was attending high school in New York when the war broke out. He talked his mother into granting him permission and enlisted in the Army in September. He gave his age as 19.

After serving for a time with the finance office, he was transferred to Gas Unit No. 1 of the Twenty-Seventh Division, taking part with them in the action at Chantigny in May, 1918.

Kirsch then was transferred back to the finance office and remained with it in Paris until 1919.

He was the youngest member of the American Legion in New York State, he says, and he knows no veteran younger than he. He doesn't think his extreme youth interfered with his soldiering, except, perhaps, that he was given less difficult assignments than the older men.

Kirsch, now married and the father of three children, expects to use his bonus money to pay debts. He lives at 326 Emerson street northwest.

Curiosity Led Ford to Seek McGuffey Data

Heard Children Shout Old Quotation; Began Hunt for Its Origin.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 16.—Henry Ford's interest in the McGuffey Readers, which led to the formation of one of the most important collections of these books in existence, was awakened by curiosity as to the source of a quotation used by his wife, he discloses in the spring number of the Colophon, a quarterly for bookmen.

"One day a group of school children romped past our house dancing and shouting," he relates.

"'Hear the children gaily shout, half past four and school is out!' quoted Mrs. Ford, and then wondered what the rest of the piece was. We both recalled it as a McGuffey exercise. Accordingly a search was instituted among Mrs. Ford's old school books. The first reader—we were both sure the lines were from the first reader—could not be found. Mrs. Ford telephoned friends who might have a McGuffey First Reader. None had one. We inspected old bookshops. The search continued long after a first reader—a score of first readers—had been found."

He then tells how his interest in the books led him to buy the farm near Claysville, Pa., in which Dr. William Holmes McGuffey was born and to erect a memorial in honor of the famous teacher.

"We have restored in Greenfield Village," he continues, "the McGuffey log cabin, and erected near it, from materials brought from the old McGuffey homestead, a log school house typical of those in which the McGuffey Readers began their long and honorable service 100 years ago.

"This old-time school house (now lighted, heated and ventilated by methods which Dr. McGuffey would have been the first to employ if they had been available) is used today as a class room for children in the primary grades of Greenfield Village schools."

3 Considered As Successor To Dr. Kramer

Miss Backus, Haworth and Holmes Mentioned for School Vacancy.

The successor to the late Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of public schools, may be one of three educators now serving the Washington school system in official capacities.

The board of education has taken no official action, which probably will be on a recommendation from Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

Because of the shock resulting from Dr. Kramer's death last week, and also because of the press of commencement activity in junior and senior high schools, there has been little discussion as to who will be chosen to fill the vacancy.

However, Miss Bertie Backus, assistant superintendent in charge of character education; Ellis Haworth head of the science department in the high schools; and Chester W. Holmes, principal of Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, have been mentioned.

The selection of a successor is complicated by the fact that Dr. Ballou and the board were considering these and other officials in the system for a new first assistant superintency—the creation of which is asked in the pending District appropriation bill.

Dr. Kramer had charge of junior and senior high schools. He would have been relieved of direction over junior high schools if the new post were established.

Miss Backus is considered a possible choice for the office that is now vacant because of Congress' opposition to the character education program she now directs. The House has eliminated funds for the experiment, including the amount for Miss Backus' salary.

Compromise Is Impossible.

There is something highly intriguing about Mr. Blanton's offer to "compromise" on $4,200,000 as the Federal contribution toward the maintenance of the National Capitol.

Previously he had held out for $2,700,000 as the total. Less than three weeks ago there was much eloquence on the floor of the House to emphasize the certainty that $2,700,000 and no more is a fair share for the Government to pay toward the expenses of Washington. Several pages of the Congressional Record were consumed in arguments to demonstrate that the proposed reductions had "ample authority, justice and basis." Now, suddenly, $4,200,000 is regarded as the proper figure. Of course, the only real objective is to get any cut, as an opening wedge for further paring in the future.

The Senate will not be fooled by this. Rather it may be trusted again to examine closely the proposed budget slashes by which a reduction in the Federal contribution would be achieved. The majority of the recommendations strike directly at those groups of Washingtonians which are most defenseless.

They propose, for example, to reduce the funds of the playground and community center departments, which have the responsibility of providing the city's children with proper recreation; they would slash the sum set up to enable crippled children to attend school; they would so reduce the Health Department's appropriation that adequate medical supervision of the schools would be out of the question; they would elminate entirely a small contribution to the National Library for the Blind.

The Senate must not be tempted by this invidious "compromise." Its only purpose is to hamstring more slowly a municipality which an organized House minority has found itself unable to disorganize at a single stroke.

Please Omit Flowers.

Ma Lester was not bothered about chic clothes to wear down Tobacco Road. Her chief misery was that she would not be buried in a stylish dress. Even Lawrence of Arabia was not above worrying about what people would think of him after death. To offset any possible misstatements, he penned his own obituary. And Bernhardt went so far as to sleep in her coffin as a macabre trial trip. Now add to the sequence the Illinois farmer who last Sunday preached his own funeral service.

Mr. L. F. Bailiff, who has been a farmer, school teacher and widely-known naturalist during his 80 years, thereby gave the farmers around Danville, Ill., something to talk about besides crops and the coming elections. Knowing how country folk feel with regard to all-day picnics, he sent out his invitations in time to round up some thousand visitors. Fried chickens and whining babies were as much in evidence as though the occasion had been organized as a festival outing. Best of all, Mr. Bailiff had the pleasure of delivering his funereal address to countless old friends with whom he had lost touch.

Mr. Bailiff did not have the advantage enjoyed by "The Scoundrel" when he revisited this earth after death. He could not gauge which tears were real and which were crocodile. At the same time, it must have been as mellowing an event for the old gentleman as it was for Huck Finn when he heard sorrowing neighbors, who thought him dead, extolling his virtues.

Policy By Fright.

The decision, said to have been reached by the British cabinet, to abolish sanctions against Italy is certain to bring sharp political repercussions in Great Britain.

In this country the question of membership in and support of the League of Nations plays little part in politics. But in Great Britain belief in the League is profound, abiding, and sometimes almost fanatical. For any party or government to repudiate the League or to reveal itself as faint-hearted in support of Geneva is to tempt the lightning of popular repudiation.

The strength of this pro-League sentiment was revealed by the famous peace ballot of 1935. About 12,000,000 voters, more than any political party had ever won to its side, indicated their firm faith in the League, and a large percentage of them declared their willingness to support the Geneva policy by economic and even military sanctions.

On this sentiment the Baldwin government capitalized at the time of the last general election, and its apparently wholehearted espousal of the League cause at the outbreak of the Italo-Ethiopian war helped to make possible the Conservative victory at the polls. For the government now to reverse itself on the question of sanctions will without doubt be regarded by no small section of the British population as an inexcusable betrayal of a great cause, which, despite outward appearances, is not yet necessarily lost.

It is no doubt with the idea of neutralizing this opposition that government leaders have begun to whip up fear of Germany, as a menace to European peace so great that it is necessary at all costs to come to terms with Italy. Oddly enough, many of those who are most zealously playing this game were, only a little while ago, distinctly pro-German in their attitude.

The strategy is transparent. Alfred Duff Cooper, the secretary for war, let the cat out of the bag when he declared that: "It is the duty of those in authority to frighten the people of this country out of their wits." But it is very dubious that the British people, who have a well-deserved reputation for political realism, will let themselves be frightened out of their wits by Mr. Duff Cooper. Indeed, the first reaction is a demand that he be arrested as a "disgraceful scaremonger."

The Republican Farm Plank.

No plank in the 1936 Republican platform is likely to provoke more controversy than that dealing with agriculture. Because of the generous subsidies which the New Deal has been paying to farmers, the drafting of this plank was especially difficult. Obviously the G. O. P. resolutions committee was torn between desires to make its policy appealing from the divergent political and economic viewpoints. The resulting compromise is not wholly satisfactory, and nowhere envisages the possibility that the entire economic basis of American agriculture may be changing.

In two fundamental respects the G. O. P. policy differs from that of the New Deal as so far developed. It rejects the idea of raising prices by creating artificial scarcity. It makes no attempt to regulate the production of individual farms. On the contrary, the Republicans favor more economical production, with the expectation that lower prices will bring increased consumption of farm products. And instead of centralized control over output and marketing they encourage the co-operative and other self-help movements.

The Republican platform makers, however, did not have the courage to turn their backs resolutely upon agricultural subsidies. They would permit "the payment of reasonable benefits upon the domestically consumed portion of such (export surplus) crops in order to make the tariff effective." Presumably these subsidies would be much more limited than those distributed by the AAA. For they would be "limited to the production level of the family type farm," they would be "an emergency measure" and they would have to prove their consistency with a balanced budget.

On the other hand, this section of the plank attempts to sidestep the obvious relationship between Federal subsidies and those Federal "coercive measures," which the plank condemns. This is not the only instance in which the Republicans at Cleveland sought both to have their cake and eat it.

As Hilding Siversen points out in his article on the page opposite, potentially the most important of the 13 points in the G. O. P. farm plank is that which outlines a national land-use program. Instead of restricting production on the individual farm, this plan calls for acquisition by the Government of "abandoned and nonproductive farm lands" for such public use as watershed protection, flood prevention, reforestation, re-creation and conservation of wild life.

Certainly a policy of this sort is needed. On a limited scale it is already being carried out by the Roosevelt Administration, as the Republican platform rather grudgingly admits. At best, however, it must be considered a long-range program, and immediate benefits to agriculture are likely to be relatively small.

Common sense demands public control over lands that are turning into desert as a result of abusive cultivation or overgrazing. Forests have been cleared from too many areas unsuitable for commercial agriculture. Mistakes of this sort ought to be corrected through a carefully planned program of land use, and many gains would result from more general stocking of farms with sheep and cattle. But Mr. Siversen is altogether too optimistic in his intimation that this one point in the opposition platform would, if intelligently carried into action, solve the whole farm problem.

In the first place, production on this submarginal land is very limited. Surpluses would doubtless continue to be produced were such areas eliminated from agricultural use. Moreover, it would not be a simple matter to shift our livestock industry from the semi-arid mountain States to humid-area farms in other parts of the country. And, even if practicable, the movement of cattle and sheep herds from the "great open spaces" to more confined areas in the humid States might easily prove economically injurious.

The hopeful aspects of the G. O. P. farm plank are that it turns away from regimentation, minimizes reliance on Federal subventions, encourages the self-sustaining "family type" farm, seeks natural means of utilizing surpluses, promises aid for soil-building, favors organization of farmers to aid the solution of their own problems—all in additin to approving long-range planning for land use.

With intelligent administration these constructive features, in spite of the indefinite language in which some of them are couched, would probably overshadow adverse results to be anticipated from the convention's embarrassed flirtation with subsidies and with dumping of exportable surpluses.

Divergencies In Labor Policy.

In the Guffey case the United States Supreme Court held that mining, like manufacturing, is not interstate commerce. Bargaining in respect to wages, hours and working conditions in the coal mining industry is, the court said, "intercourse for the purposes of production, not of trade." Consequently it concluded that the labor provisions of the Guffey act involved an unconstitutional invasion by the Federal Government of the right of the States to regulate employer-employe relationships within their borders.

Citing this decision as a precedent, the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has denied the right of the National Labor Relations Board to order the reinstatement of certain steel workers, whether or not discriminated against for union activities. The lower court thus strengthens the belief that in the Guffey decision the court of highest resort decreed the destruction of the elaborate system of collective bargaining established under the Wagner act. Certainly the far-reaching implications of that decision, taken in conjunction with the invalidation of the New York State minimum wage law, focuses attention to a marked degree upon the labor planks of the Republican and Democratic parties.

It is becoming more and more apparent that the constitutional issues involved in various industrial controversies cannot be successfully dodged during the coming campaign. Gov. Landon recognized that fact when he declared himself in favor of an amendment permitting States to pass minimum wage laws, if necessary protection could not be secured "within the Constitution as it now stands." He has not yet attempted to interpret the Republican platform declaration pledging protection of the "right of labor to organize and to bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing without interference from any source."

If the New Deal legislation providing Federal guarantees for labor should be virtually swept away by adverse court decisions, however, supervision and regulation of collective bargaining will either become largely a matter for State determination, or it will be necessary to enlarge the powers of the Federal Government by constitutional amendment. Hence Democratic leaders are said to be considering a declaration in favor of amending the Constitution as a means of maintaining Federal control over labor problems of national interest.

If a plank of this sort should be inserted in the Democratic platform, it would define the differences between the Republican and the Democratic attitude toward labor in a manner admitting of no misunderstanding. The Republican position would apparently leave regulation of intrastate employer-employe relationships with the States, and would even strengthen State powers of control by amending the Constitution "if necessary" on the minimum-wage issue. The alternative which the Democrats are reported to be weighing would transfer to the Federal Government powers now vested in the States and add thereto control over wages and conditions of work denied to the States under the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

With the Democrats squarely on record in favor of Federal control, the cleavage of opinion between the two parties would be clearly revealed as a dispute over the location of authority, not over the desirability of protecting workers against exploitation and providing a basis for effective collective bargaining.

Republicans are pledged by their platform to work for both objectives. But their candidate for President believes that the State is the proper agency for dealing with such matters. The Democrats by their legislative record and through the views expressed by President Roosevelt are already committed to Federal control. Secretary Ickes merely emphasized that attitude when he yesterday canceled a Jones and Laughlin Government contract, even though the Fifth Circuit court had previously ruled that the "unfair labor practices" charged against this company are not a matter of Federal concern.

It might be well to bear in mind that when Uncle Sam plays Santa Claus it's the taxpayer who holds the bag.

Bedlam Conventions.

From the Detroit News.

The national conventions meet in great halls, with provisions made for the presence of thousands of spectators. "If I had my way about it," wrote the late Champ Clark in his memoirs, "conventions would be held in halls with a seating capacity of not over 3,000.

"In a convention with 15,000 to 20,000 howling bellowing, perspiring visitors there is no more opportunity for deliberation than there would be in a boiler factory."

In these days of radio, practically all may hear—indeed, almost see—the conventions at work. The exclusion of a few thousand at the scene would take relatively nothing away from the public's chance to follow the proceedings. There is room for the hope that some day it will be done, despite the seeming lack of any immediate probability.

Optimistic For Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As the work of man moves forward and progress finds her rewards in the promulgation of his activity, reforms of various types are the result of his unceasing efforts toward a better and more abundant life. Since the beginning of history society has pushed onward, for life itself symbolizes activity. To stop such activity would be to stop progress, and in doing so stagnation, the prime degenerator of our social set-up, would gradually but surely dissolve the purpose of life and the living.

During the latter half of the eighteenth century the world awoke to a great metamorphosis taking place in its political life. As a result of such changes a world more complex took shape. But in due course I believe a general understanding among the peoples will be reached.

Economic and social discontent is indeed very old. We find it in China, giving rise to much strife that existed at the time Confucius was urging his people to observe the Golden Rule. It was strong in India, where Buddha longed to escape from the strife of the caste system to the quiet Nirvana. In Greece Solon came to the rescue of the oppressed with his reforms and Plato dreamed of his ideal state.

In more recent times we have More in England, dreaming of but never hoping to see his Utopia, while Campanella in Italy was wishing for the City of the Sun. Many have read the books of Bellamy or William Morris, each hoping for a change in the economic and social order into something they would like better. In our own day we are all acquainted with the theories of Karl Marx, the corporate state of Mussolini, the fascist state of Adolf Hitler, the five-year plan of the Russians and last but not least our own New Deal experiments.

These plans and promises of a better life are supported by millions of conscientious people hoping and praying for a world free from wars and strife which have been inherent results of the systems in the past. Man will go on working and trying to better his conditions confronted by obstacles which can only retard but never really defeat his purpose.

We are living in a great age, this age of our own social reform, and we owe it to ourselves as well as to posterity to think constructively and do our work well.

Bill Of Particulars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Senator Norris made a radio address on June 14 and asked for a bill of particulars against the New Deal. The recent impeachment proceeding, in which a Federal judge was found guilty, set the precedent that a high official may be removed from office on a charge of general unfitness, though found not guilty of specific charges.

The Senator says the AAA was meant to help the farmers, and forgets what his colleague from Michigan revealed and closes his eyes to the fact that the tenant-farmers in the South were hurt by the AAA.

Senator Norris calls Landon the man nobody knows. The voters of this country know Landon's record for economy as Governor of Kansas, and they also know Roosevelt's record for spending as Governor of New York.

Senator Norris hints of special interests behind Landon. Didn't the Senator hear of the silver bills, or was he too busy worshipping at the feet of the dictator?

Senator Norris says Roosevelt is an ardent believer in the merit system. But that needs no discussion—for one has only to "look at the record."

The Senator calls for a non-partisan election. That will take place—and their battle cry will be, "Stop Roosevelt."

New Deal Employment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Who says the New Deal party hasn't created employment? It must have taken a large staff of ancient history readers to dig up from obsolete news articles what purports to be Landan's stand on some obscure past policies.

Now of all agencies that can least afford to have the past raked up against them, to explain their subsequent deviations, evasions, and outright repudiations of word and charted course, the New Deal government holds undisputed leadership in the front rank.

Farley's outburst sounds like mere bluster to alibi and excuse a cause that is washed up.

"Did He Or Didn't He?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

For the past few days when the papers have been so full of the new Republican candidate for the Presidency, one question has been persistently in my mind. I have read every line written about him hunting for the answer to this question. Column after column have I persued, but there is no word in answer to my inquiring mind.

Night after night have I bothered about it, "Did he or didn't he," that is the question. To the rhythm of the clock as the pendulum swung back and forth, "Did he or didn't he?" I simply must have the question answered or gone is my sleep; gone is my peace of mind, gone is my hope of a pleasant summer, carefree and happy. Everything else has been told, he was a good little boy; he was a good young man and reports say he will make the greatest, grandest, most wisest, just a perfect President.

Here is my question and in agony of mind, body and spirit I ask it, for fear it won't be answered and I will have to go through the silent watches of the night still wondering.

Did Mr. Landon like spinach when he was a little boy?

No Vote, No Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is inspiring to read the communications which daily adorn the pages of your popular paper. But it is the duty of someone to call attention to the fast-growing suicidal tendency of negligent voters—in other words, the "stay-at-homes."

Whenever an election involving a city's welfare comes before the voters, it is civic negligence to fail to vote. It has been said: "He who does not work, neither should he eat." If that be logic, then let's cry, "He who does not vote, neither should he talk," or condemn the powers that be when, perhaps, his vote could remedy conditions. To allow any matter of vital interest to an entire city to be settled by a small minority is extremely bad.

The man or woman who makes his or her home in Alexandria must, in order to keep the city the best type of home site and influence, register his or her expression through the ballot. When this franchise right is truly exercised, no false influence can stand before it. When all the people vote there is no doubt that the affairs of our city are going well.

Poor old Alexandria, with a voting population of near 6,000, it is extremely difficult to get 3,000 to the polls. They know their duty, but fail to do it. Sad, but true.

If you don't vote, then stop talking about conditions.

Fourth Of July Fun.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Fourth of July is going to find a great many lonely people in Washington—people tired of seeing the sights alone, tired of being alone. A lot of these people have cars.

On the other hand, there are quite a number of orphans in Washington and vicinity who would be thrilled to be alone; that is, with just one or two persons. Why can't arrangements be made for a group of people owning cars to take a few of these children to the beach, coming back in time for the fireworks? Such a group could be headed by someone in authority from the aslyum.

Buses are undoubtedly provided to take whole asylums out—but don't you think that just as folks get tired of being alone, orphans get tired of being together? Individuality is the keynote of today—let's give them a chance to express theirs!

To answer those who will say it's a lot of worry—of course it is—I don't know of a better way to forget your loneliness. Can't something be done about this? Isn't there some way of grouping people together, not to play Lord and Lady Bountiful for a day, but to give themselves a real, enjoyable worthwhile Fourth.

Hamilton And Farley Compared.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I observe that the chief spokesman, chief vote herder, manager plenipotentiary, and prime minister of the Roosevelt Administration, the honorable James Aloysius Farley, is quite solicitous (if not sorrowful) over the fact that the Republicans saw fit to nominate a nonentity as their standard bearer and I wonder why Mr. Farley is so disturbed if their candidate is as weak as he pretends that he is, for in that case he could just pass the word on to his lieutenants to take it easy.

Mr. Farley is evidently a believer in the Machiavellian theory of government: That the voters are so dumb that they will mark the ballots as told even to the extent of surrendering their rights as a free people; that a democracy can not long endure; that his candidate, therefore, will receive the support of the 48 States and the District of Columbia thrown in for good measure.

Actions often belie words. It is a case of the jitters, for, astute politician as he is, he knows only too well that nonentities of the type of Mr. Landon have risen up many times to become great and successful leaders of social and political revolutions, and if there ever was a time in the history of the country when such a leader was needed it is now. It is a matter of record that the initiative and will of the Roosevelt Administration are the initiative and will of his ministers. They are known so well now that the sane porton of the population, Democrats as well as Republicans, will heave a sign of relief when they are gone. To compare them as administrators with the administration of Gov. Landon of Kansas would only be a mockery of Americans' conceptions of government.

If, as Mr. Farley boasts, the 48 States will be found in the Roosevelt column on election day, then this will become a one-party government. In the past the recognition of continuity in political life has given dignity to our party struggles. By these contests we have continued to live in freedom, and when they cease the only hope left for the people will be that our despots will prove benevolent enough to leave us the conventional animal comforts as a consolation for our departed liberties. But if Mr. Farley is really astute he will not lull himself into the belief that there will be no contest. In Mr. Hamilton he will meet a foe who will not be his inferior, who is as well educated, as fluent a speaker, as shrewed a manager, as energetic a fighter, as he. And it will not be surprising to the majority of our citizens on the morning after election if the slogan "Lose with Landon," suggested by Mr. Farley, has been subrogated by the more appropriate slogan "Land with Landon" in the White House.

DEMOCRATUS.
Washington, June 15.

Where The Bee Flops

IN June the air is heavy with the scent of roses and honeysuckle. The rose, a drawing room pet, is universally loved and admired. The honeysuckle, a hardy pioneer if there ever was one, is very generally scorned. Which seems to demonstrate that while theoretically we all love the hardy pioneer and look with a kind of tolerant contempt on those who are softened by civilization, actually we are ourselves softened and our admiration smacks of insincerity.

When we speak of roses and honeysuckle we speak with bias. It at once occurs to you that a bee would have a different story to tell. Quite as a matter of course you quote Ariel: "Where the bee sucks, there suck I." And what better place can there be than where the honeysuckle dwells? As a honey producer (you say) the rose is a negligible quantity (you read that somewhere), but it should be manifest to any bee intelligence that a kindly Providence has seen to it that the honeysuckle should take up the good work where the locust blossoms left off.

But, alas, dear amateur, putting yourself in the bee's place has made a sucker of you; and honeysuckle is a misnomer so far as bees are concerned. In June the bees desert the locust for later blossoms, but they are still in the tall trees. The honeysuckle knows them not. The honeysuckle has plenty of visitors, little gnats and butterflies and an occasional humming bird, but never a bee that I could see. Don't ask me why. I'm a reporter, not a naturalist.

Strictly speaking, honeysuckle is any plant from which honey may be sucked, but what I have in mind is the persistent plant which pleases gardeners in the North, where it is scarce, but which harasses farmers in the South, where, on slight provocation, it will cover the landscape. It is a sub-evergreen; refuses to be wholly discouraged by winter; runs along the ground, attaching itself thereto at brief intervals; and, whenever it finds anything to climb, climbs.

There is continual warfare among the weeds, each fighting for its place in the sun; some boldly, like wiregrass among the cantaloupes; some stealthily, as when field garlic rises among young onions, or when other young vegetable plants are surrounded by their doubles; but given half a chance the honeysuckle will smother them all. It literally covers all weeds and shrubs and bushes, and runs a race with the rose-brier, which, alone of woodland travelers, can make a more tangled thicket.

It encroaches on the lawn and laughs at the lawnmower, standing in awe of nothing but the Man With The Hoe. And it must be no mere weeding hoe. That will stay it, but for a few days. What is needed is a mattock or grubbing hoe, and even then the work must be done with great care. Clods must be broken and the roots raked out; else the work goes for nothing. But, curiously enough, the honeysuckle dies under a man's foot. A path through the tangle may grow grass but no honeysuckle.

The tangled mass on the ground, perhaps a couple of feet thick, is the playground of birds and varmints innumerable. This is particularly true near the banks of creeks. Here and there, a dozen or more feet from the water's edge, you may chance to find a neat little pile of periwinkle shells and wonder how they got there. Muskrat or otter? From a spot close to your feet a covey of quail ascends.

There are other things less pleasant. In May the honeysuckle helps the blacksnake to change its clothes. You do not need to envy the ophidian the apparent ease with which he acquires a spring suit. The operation is a slow and painful one.

And in June the blossoms come, lovely little flowers, some white and some yellow, white and yellow on the same sprig, all richly fragrant, and the householder gets lots of surprises. He would have been willing to swear he had taken reasonable care of all his flowers and shrubs but here is a rosebush sporting as many honeysuckle blossoms as roses; and the lilac bush, but a little while past displaying its own glories, might now well be called a honeysuckle bush, if such a thing existed.

And the fences are alive with beauty; and the banks of the creek and the banks by the side of the road have minted new gold.

Honeysuckle on the fence is quite all right with me. I can draw a line with a hoe and say, "Thus far and no farther." And there is nothing better than honeysuckle for keeping a bank firm and safe. Beach plum, Scotch broom, black locust and willow are all good, but honeysuckle is swift, sure and inexpensive. All you've got to do is to see that it does not send out its gold on illegitimate enterprises.

But how did the busy bee come to overlook so beautiful a bet?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Westchester Rubes.

Spirited competition developed among the grass-roots gentry of Westchester County last Saturday in the judging of thoroughbred vegetables grown on the estates which abound there. The occasion was the fifth annual flower show, which in Westchester corresponds to the county fair in Kansas or any other typical prairie State. When flower show time rolls around there is great primping and fussing and pother in the walled and turreted cabins of the Westchester farmers. The farmers gather in their billiard rooms in the evening and lay nominal wagers of, say, a few thousand dollars on their Brussels sprouts and cauliflower, and the weary farm wives gather in the music room or the drawing room to speculate, with excitement in their eyes, on the quality of the neighbors' strawberries.

The gentlemen put in days with their tailors in New York preparing their outfits of Bond street overalls, and the ladies trudge from shop to shop along the avenue and Fifty-seventh street buying stylish effects in Mother Hubbards and sunbonnets.

The proper selection of jewelry is another important consideration, because a Westchester Samanthy or Miranda, tending her exhibit of spinach or squash, naturally wants to make a satisfactory impression on the judges. All this contributes to the task of farming in Westchester County—a strain not experienced by your Iowa farmer.

• • • •

But, on the whole, farming in the Westchester flower set differs little from farming in the Middle West. One slight difference is that the contestants do not, as a rule, attend to their farming in person but use hired farmers, just as the ardent sportsmen of the racing set employ professional trainers and jockeys and sometimes even lease the horses which run in their colors.

Generally, when you read in the papers that a certain ardent sportsman has won a stirring victory at Belmont or Saratoga the phrase means that a horse entered in his name won the stirring victory. More than likely he personally was too busy at the office to visit the horse in the barn, and quite often he may not even be present at the track. He may be in Europe while winning his stirring victory.

So, too, in Westchester County farming as experienced by the grass-roots enthusiasts the actual handwork is done by professional farmers. A Westchester rube with an estate speaks of "my farmer" as he might say "my tailor." The tailor makes the suit which he wears with grace and charm, but he accepts the prestige that it confers because he paid for it. The professional farmer does the hoeing and sprinkling, but the cabbage is entered in the name of the proprietor. This is only fair. Of course, one may, if one prefers, attend to one's own farming, but this takes time and soils the hands and clothes and causes freckles.

• • • •

The floral section of the show attracted wide attention, to be sure, but the greatest interest centered in that division classified as "Vegetables—Estates." An estate is a large expanse of land with a mansion, a polo field and private golf course, surrounded by a high wall and having a name, such as The Elms or Shady Knoll. There are also several estates known as Friendship and one called Malice, but that one has no wall.

In the "Vegetables—Estates" division the first class judged consisted of "Vegetables to Cover Space 10 by 5 Feet" and was won by Mrs. H. Edward Manville, of Pleasantville.

Mrs. C. T. Newberry, of Irvington, won a glorious victory in the "Vegetables in Wheelbarrow" event, coming in first by a margin of one radish. The wheelbarrow had rubber tires, knee action, so as not to jar the vegetables, and two speeds forward.

Mrs. Newberry also won the "Radishes—Twelve" event and lost the "Spinach—Ten" to Mrs. Manville by the narrowest of margins.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, of Mount Kisco, received an ovation in each of the grueling strawberry contests. The first was for "Strawberries—four plates, four varieties" and the next "Strawberries—two plates, two varieties."

The rural scene resounded with wild cries of "Come on, you, Mrs. Eugene Meyer's strawberries—four plates, four varieties!" and "Come on, you, Mrs. Eugene Meyer's strawberries—two plates, two varieties!" as the strawberries headed into the stretch. It was necessary to take a photographic finish to decide the winner, and in each case a jealous lady from a nearby estate, who finished second, both times, was heard to mutter, "Mrs. Meyer's strawberries are a lot of bums."

Mrs. C. P. Case won easily in the "Potatoes—Nine," and Mrs. E. O. Patz, of Scarsdale, scored a memorable triumph in the "Rhubarb—Six."

After the program the competitors adjourned to the hunt club and made merry far into the night, singing, "Well, I'll be switched, the hay ain't pitched; come in when you're over to the farm again."

Agriculture Planks

Republicans' Adoption Of Federal 'Land-Use' Program Leaves Wallace With Difficult Alternative For Philadelphia.

By Hilding Siversen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Cleveland.

A STUDY of the 13-point Republican farm plank, in the light of what is known about the Democratic farm policy, becomes quite fascinating when all the implications are weighed. It is understood that Secretary Wallace is now engaged in writing the Democratic plank. Doubtless his pen will be guided somewhat by what the 13 points say, or fail to say.

The New Deal policy of "try anything once, and if it doesn't work, try something else," will probably apply to the Democratic farm philosophy. First the New Deal tried regimentation and individual crop benefits, the purpose being to restrict production of basic farm crops and at the same time reward farmers for decreasing their yields.

Three important and disconcerting facts impinged upon this philosophy. One was the drought, which demoralized all calculations and made it impossible to tell whether the theory was sound or not. Secondly, it is doubtful whether planned contraction was a logical result, since the great wheat State of Kansas actually increased its total acreage of wheat by 8 per cent and the great corn State of Iowa actually increased its corn ground by 1,000,000 acres at the very climax of the operation of the first AAA. Thirdly, the act was knocked out by the Supreme Court.

Then came the second AAA, which was labeled conservation, but which was mainly a pretext for handing out more benefit checks. The conservation feature is muddled by the fact that most soil-conserving crops may be planted one year and plowed up the next year, thus defeating one of the chief putative objects of such legislation, which is the contraction of cropland area. It is recognized as a meritorious act to encourage farmers to put lime and fertilizer on their soil or plant nitrogen-producing crops, but, after all, such things only increase the yield in the long run, which goes contrary to the idea of contracting basic crop yields down to the domestic demand. In the Middle West farmers are skeptical about the so-called conservation act, because it holds no permanent solution to their problems. Most of the good farmers had been following soil-conserving practices before, and don't need to be paid for doing so.

Wallace Has Indicated New Tack In 1936 Plank.

THERE IS already one symptom that Secretary Wallace will take a new tack in developing the 1936 Democratic farm plank. About two weeks ago he issued a statement advocating a drastic restriction of public grazing lands, of which there are more than 200,000,000 acres in use. It might be surmised, therefore, that he is gradually working over toward the broader idea of "land use," which is a term that is going to be heard more and more in years to come.

This idea is not new. No one individual or party has a copyright on the idea. It has been developed for several decades. However, it is only within the past year or so that it has become a sharply dramatized and highly important factor in the general farm problem.

How does "land use" affect the general farm problem?

To be as brief as possible, this is how:

The most important consideration is to contract the total American yield of basic crops to a figure which will roughly approximate the domestic demand. If this were done, farmers would receive a "parity" price for their commodities, for there would be removed the deadening and paralyzing effect of unwieldy surpluses which depress prices disproportionately to other commodities not so affected. Agricultural economists estimate that a contraction of from 30,000,000 to 60,000,000 acres would accomplish the desired result.

There are two general methods of bringing this about.

The first is by regulating the production of individual farms in the recognized humid-area crop belts. This was attempted by both the first and second AAA programs. It is regimentation. For administration it requires the erection of a huge bureaucracy. It implies the abandonment or retirement from active crop use of from 30,000,000 to 60,000,000 acres of land that was bought and paid for with much toil and deprivation, and usually at high prices, in the humid areas. There are reasons to believe that the New Deal Administration will give this up as a bad job.

The second great alternative is to bring about the needed contraction by a Federal land-use policy on a grand scale.

Washington Has Tools To Put Through Program.

IT HAPPENS that the Federal Government is in position to accomplish this, if it will but use the tools at its command.

In addition to the highly productive cropland areas of the humid States there are, roughly, 500,000,000 acres of marginal lands, included under the following catgories:

1. Public grazing lands in national forests, public domain, Indian lands and other Federal lands.
2. Badly planned reclamation and drainage areas.
3. Marginal lands which are now privately owned but which could be bought for a song.
4. Delinquent tax lands, which in some States are being taken over by the States and will be used for grazing or other purposes.
5. Vast areas suitable for reforestation, some of which are now producing crops.
6. Areas subject to erosion which could be purchased cheaply.

Just one instance will illustrate the point. Some years ago Tom Campbell, the big wheat operator, was given the use of 200,000 acres of Indian lands on which to plant wheat, at a ridiculously low rental rate. There were many other big operators. The elimination of such operations would reduce the total yield of wheat and remove competition which is now operating against the wheat farmer of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, etc.

The use of Government land for grazing is also competition against the humid-area farmer operating a family-size farm, for if the cattle were shifted from Government land to pastures on privately-owned land in humid States it would automatically contract the area planted to wheat, corn and other basic crops and thus contract the total aggregate yields.

It is plain, therefore, that if the Government would manipulate the 500,000,000 acres which are now actually or potentially under its control, in a way that would be to the interest of the man operating a family-size farm or ranch, as compared with large-scale city farmers and ranchers operating at long distance, it would be very easy to bring about the aggregate contraction of crop yields to a figure approximating the domestic demand.

Such a course would make it wholly unnecessary to regiment individual farmers and set a horde of Government bureaucrats on their heels to tell them what they can or cannot do. It would open the door wide for each farmer to raise as much as he cared to, without regulation or espionage.

G. O. P. Has Already Declared For Plan.

THE 13-POINT Republican farm plank, in its second point, advocates "a national land-use program." It does not go into details, except to mention abandoned and non-productive farm land by voluntary sale or lease, and to mention the importance of protecting watersheds from soil depletion, and to emphasize the importance of conserving wildlife. It is assumed that the Republican plank is broad enough to include a sane and intelligent management of all of the half billion acres under actual or potential control, as outlined above. However the attitude of the policy-makers in that respect still remains to be seen.

This second point has the potentiality of being by far the most important point in the whole 13-point program, for the simple reason that if it is intelligently carried into action, it would solve the whole farm problem without resort to any form of Government subsidies.

The first, fourth, fifth, sixth, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth points are worded in such broad and general terms as to include about all that any farm-relief enthusiast might demand. On the other hand, there is left the alternative of cautious policy. The third point seems to be the Lowden-Hoover plank. The others are specific details which doubtless deserve attention but which do not have a direct bearing on the paramount matter of crop control.

One significant omission is that of the Hope plan, which contemplated a rather involved scheme of Federal subsidies worked out upon the basis of the premium paid by farmers for commodities because of protective tariffs.

On the whole, the Republican farm plank, while not going as far as the land-use advocates could have wished, is better than was generally expected, in view of the strenuous pulling and hauling that was going on. If interpreted logically and in accordance with the obvious facts of the case, there is no reason why it should not prove eminently satisfactory to the agricultural industry in general. Of course it did not indorse the Frazier-Lemke principle, for it did not wish to invite inflationary ruin. It stands out emphatically against governmental regimentation and the bureaucracy which has fastened itself upon American agriculture under the New Deal. In a general way, therefore, it offers to the American farmer a lot of comforting assurances coupled with a decidedly different program than that which has been in effect during the past three years.

Democrats Will Face Mountain State Opposition.

SECRETARY WALLACE, if he intends to adopt a comprehensive land-use policy, including drastic restriction of Government grazing lands, will run up against some mighty stiff opposition in the platform-making room, for the mountain State Congressmen, many Federal office holders and the big livestock interests of the mountain States will be right on his neck. And if he attempts to take the control of all Government grazing and agricultural lands away from the Department of the Interior, as contemplated in the very excellent Kleberg bill (which would be one of the best things that could happen), he will be sticking his neck out in another direction, for Secretary Ickes just can't see that idea with a 44-inch telescope.

Those who are vitally interested in the broad aspects of national farm policy will be fascinated by what takes place in Philadelphia in a few days. The contrast between performance and promise, between theory and practice, between subsidy-granting and broad, statesmanlike policies, will be vivid. The two great parties are both trying desperately for the Middle Western farm vote. Tactically, it seems, the Republicans have the advantage, for they are not hampered by a mess of bad performance and a staggering bureaucracy. The Democrats have a further disadvantage in the fact that they have shifted from one thing to another, and after more than three years they still don't seem to know where they are going.

Off the Record.

The New G. O. P.

The Republican Party has gone folksey. The ice has moved out and things look warmer.

• • • •

We remember it when it was away uptown.

But it's left the penthouse for the ivy-hung cottage, abandoned the champagne cooler for the old oaken bucket and replaced the "In Conference. Do Not Disturb" sign with a placard reading: "Come In and Have a Snack of Bacon!"

• • • •

Shirt sleeves and slippers have ousted the morning coat, the corncob pipe is in the ascendency, and if it weren't for the women we'd have the old-fashioned spittoon back in this campaign.

• • • •

It looks almost like Denman Thompson in a revival of "The Old Homestead," and "Hearts of Oak."

• • • •

The students of the American scene are predicting that it is such sure-fire stuff with the rank and file, particularly as it comes at a time when there are signs that the peepul are possibly a little fed up with Master Minds, faculty wizards, official cock-sureness and quantity production of new schemes for remodeling Yankee Doodle and giving the pony stream lines.

• • • •

It is characteristic of the American people that they tire rapidly of any act. They may be in the mood to go for a simple-spoken, modest, reasonably deliberate candidate who shrinks from the thought that he alone has the right answer to everything.

• • • •

Even the Democrats are beginning to show concern over the impression that may be made by a Presidential candidate saying "I don't know" once in a while.

• • • •

The point about Landon that may or may not go over big is that he would never shoot a cat to conserve milk, plow under an Easter lilly to get a better market for geraniums or fall off a load of hay and say "We planned it that way."

• • • •

President Roosevelt accomplished some splendid reforms; he sincerely believes in nonstop sunshine, and he is going to be a hard man to defeat, but his chances would be far better if his Kansas opponent didn't look so gold-durned hoss-sensible, solid and dependable.

• • • •

The thing about Mr. Landon that already strikes the movie and radio audiences is that he seems a little puzzled by the big problems facing America.

That's mighty unusual just now. And bound to be impressive.

One for the Landon Speakers.

There is a perfect answer, this department thinks, to criticism of Mr. Landon on the ground of inexperience, in the old story of the big city speeder who hailed the farmer with: "Hey! Can you tell me the road to Hempville?"

"Nope," replied the farmer.

"Do you know whether I'm on Route No. 1?"

"Nope."

"If I take the next left will it take me to Syke City?"

"I dunno."

"You don't know much of anything, do you?"

"Nope . . . but I ain't never been LOST!"

Lemke Hinted As Coughlin's Third Nominee

Knutson 'Guesses' Farm Bill Co-Author Might Seek Presidency.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Washington sources close to the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin said last night that the third party ticket he plans to announce Frday will be headed by Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota.

Lemke was not in town and his friends did not know his whereabouts. Representative Harold Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, said he thought Lemke was conferring with Coughlin.

Asked whether he had heard the report that Lemke would run for the Presidency on a third party ticket backed by Coughlin, Knutson said:

"That would be my guess."

Lemke is reported to have spent considerable time recently looking up the election laws in many States as they relate to the netry of third party tickets.

Farm Bill Co-Author.

Lemke is co-author with Senator Lynn J. Frazier (Republican) of North Dakota, of the $3,000,000,000 farm mortgage refinancing bill defeated in the House last month. This bill, long tied up on in the House Rules Committee because the Administration considered it inflationary and leaders wanted to prevent it coming to a vote, was brought to the floor after 218 members had signed a petition to discharge the committee, then was defeated.

Coughlin was the most vocal advocate of the legislation and his radio talks on Rules Committee Chairman John J. O'Connor for bottling up the bill resulted in a threat by the latter that he would kick the Detroit cleric "from the Capitol to the White House."

Lemke is a graduate of Yale and former attorney general of North Dakota. He has been in Congress for two terms.

Friday Announcement.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 16. — The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin projected into the political situation today a possible third-party nominee for President.

The Detroit radio priest said the country would know by Friday whether that man, now unidentified, was to run and whether he would be considered for support by the National Union for Social Justice.

As he disclosed this definite threat of a third party, Maine election results showed two candidates backed either by Coughlin's National Union or Dr. F. E. Townsend's pension group had been nominated while four others with similar support had been defeated.

He made his statement in the newly-established headquarters of the National Union in the Grand Central area.

He said a tentative platform which appeared to square with principles of his group already had been attributed to the prospective candidate—attributed to him by a person who had brought the planks to the priest's attention.

No Townsend Connection.

He added it was possible that the same man had been discussed with Dr. Townsend and with the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, a leader in the late Senator Huey Long's "share-the-wealth" faction, but said emphatically that neither he nor the National Union was connected either with the Townsend or Smith groups.

The fact Townsendites and Coughlin followers in Maine supported the same candidates he said was "coincidence," and not done by joint action or agreement.

Coughlin, reiterating opposition to both President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon, said the Republican platform "was a step in the direction of the grave of democracy."

Its monetary plank he characterized as tending toward "slavery." He said any candidate he would support "absolutely would not be a gold man."

He emphasized that the National Union would not itself enter a Presidential candidate, saying his office as a priest would forbid such a step.

Interrogators mentioned Alfred E. Smith, former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota) and others as the possible unnamed candidate, but the priest would not comment, except to say when the names of Smith, Ely and others were mentioned: "You're getting too hot."

Smith, Townsend on Tour.

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, leader of the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth band, marked the opening of his joint speaking tour with Dr. Francis E. Townsend tonight by declaring their forces and two others had united to swing "twenty million votes" against common antagonists.

The other adherents to the alliance opposing "Farleyism, dictatorship, and communism," Smith said, were the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice and the followers of Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota.

Television Still Few Years Off, Federal Commission Is Told

Manufacturers' Representative Advises Usual Broadcasting Must Be Full-Grown When Presented; Sets to Cost as Much as Auto.

By the Associated Press.

Representatives of the radio industry yesterday were told television would not be ready for the public for several years and home sets when perfected would cost about as much as the popular automobile.

These opinions were offered by James M. Skinner, of Philadelphia, chairman of the television committee of the Radio Manufacturers Association, before the fact-finding investigation into radio and television by the Federal Communications Commission.

Skinner said television would require much wider spacebands than present broadcasting and asked the FCC to "take out" sufficient space in the present unassigned high frequency bands to assure its success.

The manufacturers' spokesman said at least seven channels should be reserved for television. He said each of these would be six times as wide as the present space allotted for all commercial sound broadcasting.

Must Be Full Grown.

Skinner said television "must be born full grown" and added experimentation carried out in radio sound broadcasting could not be carried out in offering television to the public because of obsolescence of expensive equipment. Skinner said it took ten years to popularize the motor car and sund radio with the public and that a similar time would probably be needed for television.

He said television "will never supplant the movie."

The spokesman for manufacturers said it would be "many years before anyone makes any money out of the new industry, but experimentation, which costs millions of dollars, must be continued."

Skinner said definite cost of television receivers could not be determined now, but that public sets in England were expected to sell "for about $500."

He predicted there would be a wide market for television sets in this country when they were perfected. He adde dthe cost would never "come down anywhere near the cost of sound radio receivers."

Asks Monopoly Inquiry.

The commission was asked to look into what was celled a "monopoly" in the field of radio patents controlled by the Radio Corporation of America before it assigned any new pathways of the ether for television o rother radio advances.

Samuel Darby, jr., who said he spoke for 11 "independent manufacturers" of radio sets, contended the R. C. A. patent pool would extend into the television field.

Darby said that the independent manufacturers, now licensed by R. C. A., expected to make television equipment when image transmission was perfected.

Darby contended that R. C. A. now could "grant or refuse" licenses to radio manufacturers. He asserted the patent licenses were costing the American public $4,000,000 annually and that R. C. A. already had realized $50,000,000.

Frank Wozencranft, R. C. A. general solicitor, replied briefly to Darby, saying the latter's remarks were "so insincere and so unfair" as to not deserve a long reply.

The R. C. A. attorney accused Darby of trying to demand free licenses or a reduction in cost for his plant, and said the complaint had no place in the fact-finding investigation.

Congress Speeds Bills

committee were tied on two major items of the bill. These provide for use of a $300,000,000 PWA revolving fund for grants, and for appointment by the President of a commission to consider the Florida ship canal, with authorization to spend $10,000,000 on the project if the commission approves.

The House insisted it wanted to vote on these two amendments and the Senate declined to recede on either. It is expected that House members of the conferenc committee will recommend adoption of the PWA amendment and that they will make no recommendations as to the ship canal. This is expected to result in a strong fight on the canal, with the probability that it will be defeated. The House defeated an appropriation for the project earlier in the session.

The housing bill was passed in the Senate by a vote of 42 to 24. Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, author of the bill, expressed the hope it would be passed by the House before adjournment.

Establishes Commission.

The Wagner bill establishes a separate commission to have charge of Government low-cost housing operations. The commission would be authorized to make loans and grants to local housing authorities for construction purposes and would be authorized to erect "demonstration" projects.

The bill appropriates $10,000,000 for the first year's operation of the commission, which would be incorporated. The commission would be authorized to issue $150,000,000 in bonds annually for three years. An attempt by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to limit operation of the measure to one year was defeated.

Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, bitterly opposed the housing bill, demanding that additional Government expenditures must cease and objecting to the Government competing with private industry. He pointed out that the bill provides for expenditure of more than $450,000,000, while Congress is struggling with a tax bill to raise $600,000,000.

Hours, Wages Eliminated.

The substitute Guffey bill is a virtual re-enactment of the old law with the provisions covering regulation of the hours and wages of labor eliminated. The Supreme Court held that the labor provisions were unconstitutional and that they were so involved with other provisions of the bill that the entire measure was void.

The new bill, which has the backing of the United Mine Workers of America and some of the mine operators, provides for establishment of mining districts with a commission in each to regulate prices and marketing conditions.

The old bill provided for a tax of 15 per cent on all coal mined, with a provision for a refund of 90 per cent of the tax to those operators abiding by established codes. The new bill provides a flat 1½ per cent tax, with an additional tax of 13½ per cent on coal moving in interstate commerce. Operators abiding by the code would be exempt from the latter tax.

The bill was passed by a vote of 161 to 90. It received the support of some Republicans as well as Democrats. Representative Crowther (Republican), New York, however, told the House that the bill meant going back to regimentation and codes. He predicted that similar legislation would be enacted for other industries.

Representative Fish (Republican), took an opposite view.

"The soft coal industry, stricken almost to death, has issued a Macedonian cry for help and we can't ignore it," he said. "This bill isn't a Republican or a Democratic bill, and it is our duty to pass it regardless of party."

Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, co-author of the bill, defended its constitutionality and insisted the Supreme Court had not outlawed price-fixing provisions of the old law.

Nationalization Urged.

Representative Marcantonio (Republican), New York, declared that price-fixing was only a means of artificial respiration and that the problem never would be solved until the coal industry was nationalized.

John J. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, who was in the gallery when the bill was passed, said he was "more than gratified" by the House vote.

The Senate passed the sugar quota resolution without a record vote. Vandenberg and Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, made statements in its favor. Vandenberg said Democratic tariff reductions left American sugar producers at the mercy of foreign competitors unless the quota was extended.

The Senate will begin debate on the ship subsidy bill today. Unless adjournment is delayed beyond the end of this week, it is believed doubtful whether the bill, which is subject of considerable controversy, can be passed by both houses. The Guffey bill has a fair chance of becoming law, and it is possible the housing bill finally will be enacted.

Jurors Criticize U. S. Dropping Of Fraud Cases

Letter to Cummings Charges Discrimination in Favor of Long's Friends.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, June 16. — Nine members of the grand jury which indicted friends of the late Senator Huey P. Long for income tax fraud today assailed United States Attorney General Homer S. Cummings for abandoning prosecution of the cases.

In a letter to Cummings, the jurors demanded immediate release from the Atlanta Penitentiary of former State Representative Joseph Fisher, one of the two men tried before the criminal cases against others were dropped.

They said there was a "gross and unwarranted official discrimination" against Fisher, who is scheduled to complete a sentence of a year and a half on July 9. Abraham Shushan, former president of the New Orleans levee board, the other man brought to trial, was acquitted.

Tried Before Long's Death.

Fisher was tried before the death of Senator Long at the time Long was waging a vigorous fight against the Administration of President Roosevelt. Shushan was tried after Long's death.

The statement was announced here by Arthur C. Waters, who served as foreman of the grand jury which returned the income-tax indictments.

The jurors, in their letter, said that during the investigations which led to the indictments it was reported that those under investigation "were trying to make their peace at Washington by political pull or by payment of the taxes claimed, or even by both means."

"The reported answers out of Washington," the letter stated, "either from your office, Mr. Attorney General, or from the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, were in effect that the Government of the United States would not compromise itself by condoning commission of crime for a pecuniary consideration — answers which wholly comported with the dignity and honor of the United States."

Called "Outrage."

The jurors said that, excluding Fisher and Shushan, the others indicted had not even been brought to nominal trial, and if the cases are abandoned they felt they had "every cause to feel aggrieved and outraged."

"If the evidence revealed in the grand jury room under the guidance of the assistants of the United States Attorney General's office was sufficient to indict, then we fail to understand under what proper theory consistent with the integrity and sacredness of the proper administration of justice how this identical evidence has now become so weakened as to warrant the dismissal of criminal charges."

New Tax Plan

doing entirely too much talking," he said heatedly.

In the center of adjournment negotiations moved Vice President John Garner, who conferred frequently with some of the tax draftsmen and is reputed to have told friends that Congress can easily complete its legislative slate by the end of the week.

Threat of a Senate filibuster if the House gains advantage in a tax compromise was lessened yesterday, when Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, one of the chief opponents of graduated undivided profits taxes, said he would not support such a move.

Leaders were predicting any compromise reached by the conferees would slip swiftly through both chambers.

Waiter Takes Spotlight, Bow At Gardens

Night Spot Dims Headliners for Moment to Honor Howard.

By Chanticleer.

With hoofers, maestros, kettle drummers, chefs and impresarios monopolizing the publicity spotlight week in and week out, Maryland Club Gardens steps forward and wishes to say one small word in behalf of a waiter. Just a plain, simple sort of waiter- by the name of Howard. And if every hoofer could hoof, and every chef could chef, and every maestro coul maest as Howard waits—nighteries would be paradises.

From what I learn, Hwoard has been waiting on tables since he was old enough to lift a demi tasse, and his elan and savoire faire prove it. He totes victuals with the same degree of fine art as a fellow in tails before a symphony conducts.

Carrying eight filet migonon dinners on one arm and a bucket of champagne over the other is duck soup for Howard. And if you feel like pouring out your moment's sorrows, Howard is the best listener in Washington.

Howard is colossal.

A challenge issues from the Shoreham. Namely, that the Terrace is the best and largest and most popular rendezvous for smart people in the country. The boast really is that the Terrace cannot be equaled in the world. Not barring the Riviera, London or Paris. Culbertson on Bridge

Mr. Culbertson continues his description of a contract game in the smoking car of a commuters' train.

After seeing a ridiculous slam contract (that should have been defeated three tricks) succeed, I was prepared for almost anything. I reflected that, from a kibitzer's point of view, wild bidding and fantastic play made up in excitement what they lacked in purely technical interest.

Another hand, however, made me change my opinion as to the potentialities of at least two of the players.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 dimnd.	Pass	1 heart	1 spade
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

Standing directly behind the South player, I was wondering what he would do when his partner dummy's jack was taken by South's and right-hand opponent passed to West's spade overcall. Judging from his bidding on other hands, I thought he probably would make a wild leap into two or even three no trump. His penalty double, which I had decided on as the one correct call, came as a distinct surprise. I was certain that only an expert would take that action, based on the reasoning that there was no probable "future" for the North and South hands, except on defense. North's pass to the one spade bid after he himself had opened the bidding, indicated that South would have to make a pretty strong bid (which he could not properly do) before he, North, would raise to game. Moreover, if North had reasonably good heart support, he would have strained to show it over the one spade, rather than put South in the position of guessing as to his next correct action.

The results of this so-called "light double" were startling! North opened the six of hearts and king. South returned the eight of diamonds, and North cashed two tricks in that suit before leading the five of hearts. South's ten won and now the queen of clubs was led. West covered, North took the ace and led his last heart. South won and cashed two high clubs, following with the thirteenth club. Declarer was reduced to trumps, and was quite helpless to avert further ruin. He ruffed with the seven (no other card would have made any difference) and North overruffed with the ten, exciting with a diamond which declarer had to ruff, South discarding his last heart.

The declarer, with the A J 9 of trumps left, now led the nine, hoping to force the defenders to give him two of the three tricks, but North made a clever play. With the K 4 blank, he played the four spot and South won with the queen. On South's forced trump return, declarer could have saved a trick by putting up the ace to fell the blank king, but not unnaturally, from South's double, figured that South had the king. His finesse therefore could not be criticized. North's blank king accounted for the eleventh trick taken by the defenders, for a 1,400-point penalty on a bid of one-odd!

The declarer looked much like a fish too long removed from his native element, while his partner seemed suddenly to have lost the power of speech.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

A file for recording stolen property all over the country, operating on the same principle as the famous fingerprint file, was established about three weeks ago in the Bureau of Federal Investigation and already has several thousand cards in it, each a memorandum of stolen property valued in excess of $5,000.

The file was started without fanfare of any kind. A simple and routine notice of the new service to police departments in the 48 States was included in the weekly bulletin to police chiefs published by the bureau. The result has surprised even those who were enthusiastic about this new method of pinning thefts on gangsters and burglars.

Thefts Total 250 Million.

The value of stolen property in the country amounts to $250,000,000 each year, F. B. I. officials found when they started a survey to estimate the necessity for such a service. During 1935, they found, there were 67,612 robberies, 28,685 burglaries, 247,346 automobile thefts, and 779,956 larcenies.

As explained by an official of the bureau, the file works in this fashion: if bonds, jewelry or other property valued at $5,000 or more is stolen anywhere in the country, police departments can now report that theft to the Federal Government, knowing that all the identifying data will be kept on file. Where the articles bear serial numbers these are recorded. Where they do not, a description is put on the filing card in this national library of the work of thieves. The name of the victim, the type of crime and the names of any suspects are also filed on the same card.

"The stolen property file will some day be as large and as important as the fingerprint file," said one of those in charge of the work.

"There was so much property stolen each year in the country that something had to be done. Gangsters and bands of criminals are organized to steal and beat the local police systems, whose activities are confined to their own districts, by taking the stolen property to other places for storage or disposal.

Easy to Identify.

"Now if property is recovered at the time of an arrest, for instance, it can quickly be identified in Washington and the theft definitely pinned on the individual criminal. This is going to be a big thing in checking criminal activity."

The new file was authorized by Congress, when it enlarged the scope of the work of the F. B. I. It also provided additional funds for its operation, and it is expected that further Government employment will result when the file becomes better established. The act provided for ten-year imprisonment or a $10,000 fine, or both, as punishment for thefts such as the file covers.

It was frequently found that stolen property recovered in various parts of the country were difficult to trace to their owners, and the new file operates as a sort of clearing and expediting medium for police officers.

Dooman's Rank Raised.

There's a new honor for Eugene H. Dooman, of the State Department, for, by the recent confirmation of his nomination by President Roosevelt, he has added the rank of consul-general to his status.

Dooman has been in Washington for the last three years in the Division of Far Eastern Affairs and before that time served with the rank of first secretary in the embassies in London and Tokyo.

N. L. B. Plans Swim.

Tomorrow afternoon, after work, the National Labor Board employes will have their first swimming party of the season at Glen Echo pool. Special rates are offered to those who don't forget their membership cards for the board's athletic assocation. And if there is a big and enthusiastic turnout, arrangements will be made to use the pool on a definite night each week. Irene Kitay and Ada Gunderson are the ones to turn to for any information about the newly organized swimming club.

The newly organized Social Security Board Lodge of the American Federation of Government Employes has elected its first permanent officers. Walter J. Couper was made president and Gladys R. Friedman, vice president; Gertrude Fitch, corresponding secretary; Lee Katkov, recording secretary, and Ruth Reticker, treasurer. The lodge is functioning under a temporary six months' charter, which is expected to be made permanent at the expiration of that term.

D. C. Federation to Meet.

"Tin Can Alley" doesn't sound as if it belongs in such an impressive place as the National Archives, but that is where it is.

That is what the assistant administrative secretary, Jim Preston, has dubbed the place in the basement, where the 72,000 open metal trays containing papers from the Veterans' Administration are being handled before being filed away in dust-proof, moisture-proof and burglar-proof files. Workers wearing dust masks and armed with vacuum cleaners have been working on these documents which represent some 4,600,000 individual cases for nearly a month. Slowly they are assuming order and cleanliness as they come from fumigating machines.

Before being taken to the Archives, the papers were kept in a storehouse on New Hampshire avenue, and as they had to be moved, it was thought the best place for safe keeping was in the national storehouse. The Archives will not be their final resting place, but just where that will be has not been decided.

Poisoning by Gas Is Fatal to Wife

Mrs. Emma Stewart, 48, died in Casualty Hospital yesterday from the effects of gas poisoning after she was found unconscious in her home, 1145 Abbey place northeast, by her husband last Wednesday.

Mrs. Stewart was found in the kitchen with several gas jets on the stove open. Her husband, Otho Stewart, called the fire rescue squad who revved her and took her to the hospital.

A note found in the room addressed to Mr. Stewart told of many years of ill health.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

On the Air Today

Some of the big names in radio are coming to the party tonight in honor of Mar. Small, who is just sprouting up into the very smallest division of the airways' big names. Mary, you know, is the "little girl with the great big voice." And despite her three years on the network as a singing star, not a day over 14 or 15.

Anyway, for Mary's anniversary party tonight, come Rudy Vallee, Graham McNamee, Phil Cook, Molasses 'n' January (who are not appearing this week at the Fox, as I mentioned a day or so ago) and many other NBC headliners. The show will be called "Mary Small's Junior Review."

McNamee will be master of ceremonies. He'll introduce Vallee, who gave Mary her first push into the radio branch of the show business. Walter Tetley and Janice Gilbert, child dramatic stars, then will put on a short radio playlet, "East Side, West Side."

Mary's hometown, Baltimore, contributes acts by the Three X Sisters and Louise Massey and the Westerners. Others scheduled include Eddie and Ralph ("Sisters of the Skillet"), in one of their horse operas; Larry Taylor, tenor; the Trumpet Twins, and Grace and Eddie Albert, known as "The Honeymooners."

And because every child loves action and adventure, Frank Buck will be present with a bit of "bring-'em-back-alive" stuff.

The time is 8, the station, WMAL.

Special today:

Burns and Allen: What Defoe overlooked in writing "Robinson Crusoe," Gracie fills in with a dissertation on "The Private Life of Mrs. Robinson Crusoe," WJSV, at 7:30.

Lily Pons: Sings "Je Vous Adore" and Bellini's "Pollaca," with Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra, WJSV, at 8.

Musical Reveries: Features Sam Herman, xylophonist, in a special arrangement of "Star Dust," WJSV, at 11:15 a. m. Stuart Churchill sings "I Surrender Dear."

Preview: Stoopnagle and Budd give listeners an idea of what they will do with Fred Allen's "Town Hall Tonight," when they take it over for Allen's vacation period this summer, WRC, at 8. With Allen and Portland, they appear in a playlet supplanting the Mighty Allen Art players.

That new series by Benny Fields, star of the late "Ziegfeld Follies of the Air," will not be heard from WJSV inasmuch as his new show comes at 6:15, Washington time, just when Arch McDonald is doing his turn . . . Morton Bowe, linotype operator turned tenor, has been selected as featured vocalist for the summer Jack Benny series, with Don Wilson, Tim and Irene and Don Voorhees Orchestra. Begins June 28.

• • •

"Clara, Lu 'n' Em" have another air contract. You may remember they retired last winter when one of the girls became the proud mama of a daughter. They begin June 26, supported by Ted Fio-Rito and his orchestra, on an N. B. C. net . . . It is hinted along Radio Row in Chicago that Ruby Taylor will appear soon in the "Amos 'n' Andy script. Reason: Elinor Harriott, who played the part of Ruby before, was offered the job again provided she would go to the West Coast for the broadcasts. She couldn't leave Chicago, so it is assumed that another "Ruby" will be signed.

• • •

Last Word: Eddie Duchin and his orchestra will replace Jacques Renard and his tooters in the Burns and Allen show, effective June 24. Milton Watson also will be replaced.

Cotton 'Tops' In Wardrobes Of the Elite

Air-Conditioned Cloth in Lovely Colors Now Stylish.

'Tubability' of Fabric Makes It Ideal for Lingerie.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

COTTON, that much-abused stepchild of the lingerie family, has at last been accepted by the "best people," and even attained an enviable place in the world of fashion this summer. Cotton lingerie for these many years has been considered quite plebian, not only from a standpoint of fabric, but it didn't seem ever to make the grade, as far as style was concerned. It just didn't "belong" to wardrobes that were progressive.

Times have changed, and cotton lingerie this season is so lovely in coloring and design and so smart in styling it is being worn by the most fastidious. This is good news to all women, because cotton has long been noted for coolness and "tubability." Added to this are the newest cottons, which have been air-conditioned. By a special process, the lint has been removed, opening the "windows" of the cloth, permitting increased circulation of air to and from the body.

Besides improving the appearance of the cloth, this new air-conditioning definitely speeds the evaporation of perspiration, and since the porosity of the cotton has been increased, according to certified laboratory tests, it acts as a cooling system for the entire body. In texture, this summer's cottons are finer and smoother, and adapt themselves perfectly to any and all of the vagaries of styling.

The new cotton lingerie is young and feminine-youthful in style and beautifully trimmed with lace and embroidery. To wear with white linen or cotton frocks and suits, there is white handkerchief linen lingerie, trimmed with val lace. The deep tones popular this season, May wine, aqua and navy, have been borrowed by lingerie designers—printed dimity and batiste—and fashioned into night clothes and lounging garments. These are available in both plain and lace-trimmed versions.

Sheer cottons in pastels and soft deep tones are the mediums for night gowns, self-trimmed with ruffles and odd collars. Negligees, cool and feminine in styling, are also available in these attractive materials. Hand-made and hand-detailed lingerie of fine batiste, is given a modern touch by the smart combination of color and the fitted silhouette. It will be remembered that up to now, they have been shapeless garments—cool and lovely in workmanship, but with no style appeal.

Short pajamas, for sleeping, a new cotton style this season, are made of both woven and knitted materials; some of these are backless. White cotton slips also follow the trend of their silken sisters and appear in the novel one-piece versions, without side seams—because of the special cut, they adjust themselves to the figure. Some women prefer these to silk, to wear under cotton costumes.

The last six years has seen an interesting evolution in all lingerie, silk and cotton alike, particularly the former. From garments which hung from the shoulders, with no attempt to fit the figure, to the modern pieces which fit almost like a second skin, the transition has been startling. Cotton lingerie as a smart acquisition to a smart wardrobe has been trying to claim an important place in the vogue for the last three years. This season marks its first success in that direction.

There is a definite trend toward femininity in lingeries of all "accepted" materials and, according to authorities, this is no mere fashion whim but a permanent (as far as anything in fashion is permanent) fixture in the mode. Following the same trend in chic frocks, which lean toward the more feminine type of costuming this summer.

Gown, pajamas and house coat shown in the accompanying sketches are of May wine printed dimity and are also available in aquamarine and navy. They sell for $1.95. For information call The Post fashion editor, National 4200, branch 323.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"What Can I Do?" Asks Girl, Telling of Love for Fiance Whose Family Doesn't Measure Up Socially.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column every morning with great interest and have long admired your ability to cope with problems of others. I sincerely hope you can help me with mine. I am very much in love with a boy who is the kindest and sweetest person I know. I became engaged to him after having gone with him about six months. I love him dearly and I know he loves me, but I did not meet his family until after we were engaged.

* * * *

My family are descendants of an old aristocratic Southern family. They have a great deal of family pride and high ideals. His family are simple people, honest and hardworking with no social background whatsoever, but they are pleased as they can be over his engagement and have told me so.

* * * *

I know my family would not approve our engagement if they had met his family, for they do not even speak correct English. What am I to do? I cannot fairly marry him while feeling ashamed of his mother and father. He has a college education and is very brilliant. I feel very low and deceitful, yet I love him terribly. Thanking you for any advice, I am, sincerely yours, UNHAPPY.

Rule for Marriage.

DEAR UNHAPPY: Professors who conduct classes in marriage in leading universities in this country unite in emphasizing the importance of choosing one's mate from one's own social class. The man and wife whose background are similar are infinitely better equipped to make a go of their marriage than they would be if they came from dissimilar backgrounds, these authorities insist. However, it is my opinion that there can be exceptions to all rules, including this one. But I should say that it depends entirely on the individuals concerned whether they can happily live above a rule which holds true for mankind in general.

* * * *

The best advice I can give you is to make your engagement known to your family, if you have not already done so; let them meet your fiance and his family, and gradually test the temperature of your own reaction to their reaction to each other. As things stand now, you are trembling with fear of the unknown. It is far better to deal with the known. It may be, once the whole situation has been brought into the open, that you will discover your love for the man is strong enough to enable you to batter down your family's anticipated resistance to the match; and that his family is sufficiently aristocratic in spirit and being—despite their imperfect use of the English language—to eventually command your wholehearted respect and daughterly devotion.

* * * *

It may be, on the other hand, that seeing the boy against his background through your family's eyes, you will make the sad discovery that this feeling you now call love is but a passing infatuation, born of propinquity; and that it cannot withstand the cold and searching light of every-day reality.

* * * *

You realize, of course, that family background, in-law relationships, have to be dealt with in marriage; that they constitute an integral part of the union. Suppose you marry this boy. Inevitably the paths of his family and yours must cross under your very roof. How do you think he would react to the knowledge that your family was either condescendingly patronizing or coldly contemptuous toward his unlettered parents? Don't you think it very likely, in that event, that this love you cling to so desperately would gradually turn to ashes? Each of you would hate the other for things over which you two as individuals were not to be held responsible. As he cannot help his parents' background, so you cannot change the fact of having been born in a different milieu.

* * * *

The only thing which might make a difference in such a situation would be your wholehearted love of and respect for his parents. Then you would not feel on the defensive about them. You would bring them forward and introduce them proudly to your family and to all your family's friends. You would not be conscious of their grammatical defects; your heart would be tender toward their simplicity and their honesty; you would be grateful to them for being what they are and for having borne and nurtured the paragon who is their son.

* * * *

Don't rush into marriage here. Take your time in digesting the whole situation. That will be much better than giving up your fiance without due reflection, or in marrying him without realizing in full the seriousness of such a step under existing circumstances. It might be well to give thought, too, to the possibility that you are not worthy of the young man; that yours and your family's snobbishness is a cheap and valueless thing as contrasted to the unpretentious honesty and simplicity of his family's address to life. Perhaps it would be best for him to marry a girl whose background is as closely tied up with the struggle for self-respecting existence as his life has been. Such a girl might make him a better helpmate, and afford him more lasting inspiration, tenderness, respect and affection than you could ever provide. Remember he may have things to bring to you, even in his family background, that are quite as commendable as anything your family background has to offer him. M. H.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY DON'T BUY many things on time payments because they found it an easy way to get beyond their depth and have to spend the following year on a tension. But they do buy books on the installment plan. Partly because they have an awfully bright pair of youngsters coming along whom they want to grow up with good books. And partly because the monthly payments on books aren't usually big enough to pinch them much . . . especially since they've made a rule not to buy a new set till the old one is paid for.

The result of this arrangement is that they have a distinguished library that they wouldn't have been able to buy in any other way. And the children enjoy the books, even though they're not so big yet. They're being taught to use the books all they like, but to handle them with respect.

They've taken the pleasantest room in the house for the library—the sun parlor. The plain wall adjoining the house has been filled in with plain openbook shelves, and the space under the windows on the other sides of the room have been filled with open shelves, too. There is an Oriental patterned rug on the floor in deep blues and wine tones . . . the curtains are of light blue organdy and the furniture coverings are of blue linen with flowered patterns in them . . . made as slip covers so they can come off easily for washing.

Hobbies Fast Gaining Status Of Necessities

New Leisure Will Bring Increasing Demand for Avocations.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

HOBBIES have in the past been looked upon as one of the accompaniments of wealth. They were a luxury in more senses than one, for they pre-supposed leisure time and money. To collect pictures, bibelots, armor, lace; to golf, fish, hunt or ride, are all expensive and require either special knowledge or long practice, which one can get only if one has leisure.

But it begins to look as though the time were fast coming, indeed were at hand, when the luxury of the past is the essential of the future. If the children are to be prepared for a life where the working hours are so short as to consume only a third or less of one's waking time, something must be provided to occupy the resultant leisure.

All hobbies are not expensive. They all require, however, some special training if they are to be of value. This special training the child should and could get in his youth, just as he gets special training for his job.

A hobby to be of any value must be of absorbing interest. It is not a thing that one can pick up and lay down, or change from week to week, any more than a job is. To be satisfactory, it must be steady and grow and expand with the child's development.

Anything which has this power of growth can be a hobby. The only necessary features of a hobby are that one loves it and does not earn one's living by it. One man's trade may be another one's hobby, and vice versa.

It is up to the parents and teachers of today to prepare for this future need of the children. They must open to them as many outlets as possible, so that from them all the child may choose two or even three to follow—one, his vocation by which he earns a living; the others his avocations by which he lives.

Career Is Blamed For Childlessness

Wife Often Places Self Above Her Home.

A wife's preference for a professional career of her own makes for a childless marriage, judging from results of a survey presented by Dr. Paul Popenoe of the Institute of Family Relations at Los Angeles at the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Eugenics Research Association held recently in New York.

Twenty-three per cent of the couples included in the survey were childless because wives were ambitious for careers, he said. Twenty-seven per cent had no children "because they were social climbers, wanted to be free to travel or thought children would interfere with their pleasures," he continued.

Economic pressure accounted for 16 per cent of the childless marriages, poor health for 9 per cent, unwillingness to pass on unsound hereditary traits for 5 per cent and "6 per cent simply disliked children." In one-third of the cases, he reported, childlessness was involuntary.

CHAPTER SEVEN.

HOW BEWILDERED Ruth would have felt had her guardian angel whispered in her ear what was in fact the truth. Namely, that Jane Shipton was deliberately keeping her sinister super normal power in leash. Thus, and thus only, could she earn the 5 pound note which had been given her the day before by her helpful client, Iris Trefane. Indeed, during the last few minutes she had but echoed that lady's words, including the roses, roses, all the way." Not that Iris had intended them to be so used. She had supposed the fortune teller would embroider and embellish what had been told to her concerning Ruth Starling's fortunate and successful future with her new friends.

"Have I what's called a good line of life?" asked the girl diffidently.

Mrs. Shipton gave a perfunctory glance at the left hand of her client—that hand which, according to the art or craft of palmistry, only tells with what attributes a human being is born before life, character, and above all, the will, in fashioning his or her destiny.

All at once she uttered a short, sharp exclamation of surprise, and turned her attention to the palm of Ruth's right hand. "Did you have some one who hated you as a child? A stepfather or stepmother?" she asked, not raising, however, as she spoke, her eyes from what she was staring down at intently.

The rosy little palm had on it some curious and most unusual lines—including a sign Mrs. Shipton, lifelong though her experience of palmistry had been, had never seen before.

"O, no, my father died when I was a baby, and my mother never thought of marrying again."

Finds An Eavesdropper.

Mrs. Shipton looked up, and Ruth felt startled, for the fat face, pale before, was now as if drained of all color. Then suddenly the woman exclaimed: "Excuse me for a second——"

She hurried over to the door which separated the front room from the back room, and, opening it quickly, she saw that a suspicion she had suddenly formed was correct, for Iris Trefane had slipped through the baize door and stood so closely pressed up to the other mahogany door that she nearly fell forward as it opened.

"I was just coming to say that I'm going off for a quarter of an hour," said Iris quietly, and stepping backwards as she spoke. "There's something I want to do close by here, so I'm going off for a few minutes. I shall be back before you've done with my friend."

Mrs. Shipton felt bitterly indignant. Fancy a lady demeaning herself by listening behind a door! Mrs. Trefane wanted to make sure, no doubt, that she was getting her money's worth.

With rising anger she followed the eavesdropper into the back room. "I've done with your friend already," she said coldly. Then she added: "There wasn't much to say, was there—only 'roses, roses, all the way?'"

"Nonsense! She's only been with you five minutes," said Iris tartly. "I told her you always gave every one a good half-hour."

Iris Is Humiliated.

She was sharply vexed with herself, and she felt what she rarely had occasion to feel, ashamed, and humiliated, too. This was the first time in her life that she had ever done such a thing as that. But she had been not only curious, but anxious, too, to know exactly what the fortune teller was telling Ruth Starling. Her irruption into her own and her husband's life had meant, and was meaning, far, far more than anyone would ever know. They had been in very truth, and to her especially, at their last agonizing gasp.

During the winter and spring there had been hours when Iris Trefane had contemplated a well-staged suicide; when, brave though she was, she felt she had come to the end of her endurance.

So now she gripped Mrs. Shipton's hand, as lowering her voice she exclaimed: "Remember she's an actress and has come over here to put on a play! My husband doesn't think much of the play, still, he may be wrong. I don't ask you to promise too much—just stick to the fact that Capt. Trefane can, and will, make her famous. It happens to be the simple truth. Also, tell her to keep clear of men."

She waited a moment, then said in a casual tone: "Miss Starling has money to burn. If you please her today you may find her very generous."

The fortune teller bolted the baize door and then, shutting the other door, she began slowly walking back toward her client.

Suspects Trefanes.

"Mrs. Trefane has gone to do a little job she remembered she had to do close by. She says she won't be long."

Mrs. Shipton was speaking in a mechanical tone. It was years since she had felt as shaken as she was feeling now.

"Do look into your crystal for me," said Ruth eagerly. "I've heard you see such marvelous things——"

Now there was echoing in Mrs. Shipton's mind the words Iris had uttered just now. So that was what these greedy folk were after? She might have guessed as much, instead of supposing that the matter concerned just one business deal. It was evidently to be a lot more than that. Mrs. Trefane and that scoffing captain of hers, who didn't believe in her, Jane Shipton's, gift, meant to get all that girl's money. That was why the poor young thing was to be warned to keep out of love's way.

As she came up to the table she looked consideringly at Ruth's flushed and eager face. It was a face which recalled to her poignantly that of her dead sister, whom she had truly and unselfishly loved.

"If I gaze into my crystal, you mustn't expect what I see to be all good," she said in a sombre tone.

"Of course I sha'n't!"

Falls Church Entrant Wins Recipe Prize

Fruit Beverages Most Popular in Post Contest for Thirst Quenchers.

LAST week's Post contest for frosted beverages brought in scores of recipes for tempting hot weather thirst quenchers. Fruit beverages were the most popular, with such interesting sirups as the old-fashioned fruit shrubs making their appearance.

First prize of $5 is awarded Mrs. Allan Hildebrand, Falls Church, Va., for her recipe for strawberry mint julep delicious. Second prize, $3, goes to Mrs. W. C. Smith, 925 F street northwest, for her recipe for golfer's milk punch. The three remaining prizes of $1 each go to Miss Stella Randolph, 834 Madison street northwest, for her recipe for cherryade; to Mrs. G. G. Crawford, Strasburg, Va., for her recipe for raspberry shrub, and to Mrs. Betty Frazier, 719 Third street northeast, for her recipe for maple coffee cream.

The recipes are printed below.

Strawberry Mint Julep Delicious.

Make a sirup by boiling together 1 quart of water and 2 cups of sugar. Soak 12 sprigs of fresh mint in 1½ cups of boiling water for 5 minutes; strain and add to the sirup. Then add 1 cup of orange juice, one cup strawberry juice and the juice of 8 lemons. When cold add 2 cups of claret, and pour into a punch bowl with a large piece of ice to chill.

Dilute with cold water to taste, and add a few strawberries and fresh mint leaves as a garnish.

Golfer's Milk Shake.

Pour into a deep bowl 1 quart of rich buttermilk, chilled, 1 cup of basic sugar sirup and the juice of 1 lemon and 2 oranges. Beat briskly with a dover beater until light and foamy. Pour over cracked ice. Fill glasses and top each with dash of grated orange rind and a sprig of mint on the side.

Basic Sugar Sirup.

Blend 3 cups sugar, 3 cups hot water, ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar and ¼ teaspoon salt until sugar is dissolved. Boil slowly for 5 minutes and store in covered jar in refrigerator. Add to fruit juices as needed.

Cherryade.

Pour the contents of a bottle of ginger ale into one of the freezing sections of the mechanical refrigerator to be used later for cooling the beverage.

Make a sugar sirup as foundation by boiling together:

2 cups sugar
1 cup water
1 large piece preserved ginger

Boil 5 minutes; remove ginger. Combine the following ingredients and add sugar sirup when cold:

Juice of 2 lemons
Juice of 1 orange
3 cups crushed cherries
6½ cups water

Before serving add ginger ale which has been frozen to a mush.

Raspberry Shrub.

Put 3 quarts raspberries in an earthenware jar. Pour over them 1 quart cider vinegar. Let stand for 24 hours then crush through a jelly bag. Pour the resulting strained juice over 3 more quarts of raspberries and proceed as before. Continue until you have as much juice as you want. Add 1 pint of sugar to each point of juice and boil 20 minutes. Cool and bottle.

To serve, allow 2 or 3 tablespoons of shrub to a glass of crushed ice, then fill the glass with water and stir.

Maple Coffee Cream.

3 cups drip coffee
6 tablespoons maple sirup
½ cup stiffly whipped cream sweetened with maple sugar.
Scraped maple sugar (optional)

Combine the coffee and maple sirup and chill. Pour into tall slender glasses. Garnish with the maple whipped cream and if desired, sprinkle with scraped maple sugar.

Contest Recipes Found Identical

Mrs. Zemer, Mrs. Miller Win Honorable Mention.

Rainbow elixir and rainbow nectar, two recipes entered last week in The Post's recipe contest for frosted beverages by Mrs. Edna Zemer, Benjamin Franklin Station, and Mrs. I .R. Miller, 23 Philadelphia avenue, Takoma Park, Md., respectively, were exactly alike and for that reason could not be awarded a prize. They have been awarded honorable mention, however, and Mrs. Miller's version of rainbow nectar is printed below.

Rainbow Nectar.

8 ounces orange juice
8 ounces lime juice
1 pint white grape juice
1 pint loganberry juice
1 pint raspberry juice

Fill tall, slender glasses with crushed ice. In the bottom of each pour a little orange juice, over this very carefully, so that the juice will not blend, add the loganberry juice, then the lime juice and so on until the glasses are filled. Garnish with a green cheery and serve with small sandwiches or simple cookies.

Personality In Dress

WHY DO SOME dresses thicken your whole figure, while others slim you down, pep you up, and serve as a beauty treatment?

Well, let's look at Mrs. Bigger. She wears a white silk, coin-spotted in dark blue. Broad, high blue belt and blue frill on skirt give cross-wise lines, no slimming up-and-down lines.

Her frilly Margot collar makes her look chuckle-necked. So does the curly, low-dressed hair. Full sleeves and wide shoulder line widen her figure. White T-strap shoes enlarge her feet.

Now let's see her in a smart, cool, navy blue sheer. Hair swept up and back; V-neck, lengthening face line. Shoulders not widened a bit. Flattering cape sleeves, a suggestion of soft cowl at neckline, long slim panel front, skirt 10 inches from floor, not 14. Gay touch in flowers tucked slantwise in belt. Dark plain pumps which send the eye on down, adding to the height.

Refrigerator Cake Recipes Sought in Summer Food Contest

Refrigerator or ice box cake is listed among summer's favorite desserts, and for that reason it has been chosen as the theme of The Post's recipe contest for this week.

Though refrigerator cake is a pretentious looking dessert, and will serve for company as well as family dinner, it is simple to prepare and has the advantage of being a dish that can be prepared well in advance of the meal—a feature especially pleasing to housewives who like to do their kitchen work in the cool of the morning.

The trick in preparing a perfect refrigerator cake is in blending the base of vanilla wafers, ginger snaps, lady fingers, crushed graham crackers or stale cake with a filling that is just the right consistency to permit the finished cake to unmold and hol dits shape and slice without crumbling.

Send your favorite refrigerator cake recipe to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Cash awards will be offered to the five persons submitting the best recipes. First prize will be $5; second prize, $3; and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

Be sure to mail your recipes in time to reach this office not later than Saturday morning.

American Diets Becoming Sensible

Plain, Nutritious Food Is Featured on Menus.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

There is one sort of health faddist I avoid whenever possible, but occasionally I am cornered. I refer to the food amateur who talks glibly about calories, vitamins, and "values"—so much so that every one within earshot is completely bowled over with a plethora of scientific terms garnished with "fine herbs." Unfortunately the "orator" is usually a very charming woman, one whom we all admire until—well until she launches forth on her favorite topic, "My Diet."

Well, the reason I am complaining is because I was bludgeoned into hearing one of these—shall we say—enthusiasts. The occasion was a visit to a university town in a neighboring State. My hostess, solicitous as to my entertainment, presented me at an afternoon tea, where a lady was scheduled to deliver a short dissertation on "Our Foods."

Far be it from me to criticize the lecture, for it was a lecture wholly devoid of terminal facilities, and what promised to be a short interlude in a pleasant visit ended in a rush for dinner.

"Act" Hides Real Thoughts.

That evening my hostess remarked:

"Wasn't Mrs. —— wonderful? I could see that you agreed with everything she said," I've never been credited with even a shadow of histrionic ability, but the shade of David Garrick must have come to my rescue. Here I committed a gross faux pas in asking: "Do you want to know what I really think?" She insisted that she did. Then the emotions of the afternoon burst forth. My injured spirit revolted and I said some pretty harsh things; that such stuff was twaddle, etc., etc. As I concluded my unguestlike tirade there was a pause. I sensed that I was to be punished. In a quiet tone she remarked: "I know that you write articles on health and I read them (bless her for that white lie), and I want you to write one or two on foods—nutritious foods—promise me?" I promised, and here goes:

Diets Becoming Sensible.

Before discussing specific foods there are certain generalizations that should be considered. Food provides energy for the maintenance as well as the industry of life.

It is well to have an interest in food, but it should be as a means to an end and not an end in itself. Few of us, however, have clear cut ideas as to just why foods are needed and used. The average adult in 50 days consumes an amount equal to his own weight, while a young child requires but 10 days. A normal individual can go without eating—that is, live on the tissues of his own body—for several weeks. Deprive him of water, however, and his life will cease within from 60 to 72 hours.

Highly Seasoned Dishes Found Hard on Digestion.

With a better understanding of food values it appears that American diets are becoming sensible, plainer, and hence more nutritious.

No Strings to These Beans

MANY of us housewives are all wrong when we talk about serving string beans for meals, for strictly speaking, there are no string beans, but instead stringless beans. The development of the bean has been perfected to such an extent that strings are very rare in the canned varieties.

Then, too, available for us in the tin cans are beans of different sizes than are ordinarily available in the open market. For instance, the very small whole bean comes in cans, while the market bean is the size that is generally found in cut pieces in the canned product.

For special salads where long, straight beans are desired there are special packs called asparagus style, which means the beans are arranged standing up straight and close together just the way asparagus tips are packed.

With the various types of beans on the market it is possible to select just the right style and size for any special or everyday occasion or dish.

The liquid which is found on the beans is a simple brine made of water and salt. It contains good food value absorbed from the beans and should be used if the housewife is being economical and considerate of the health of her family.

There are on the market two kinds of beans, the green bean and the wax bean. Wax beans have the golden yellow color that is a reminder of the sunshine stored in the very body of the bean. They surely do add the cheery color note to many a cooked dish or well chilled salad.

All beans used for salads have a fuller flavor if allowed to stand in French dressing.

Students Hear Pyle's Address At Graduation

Principal Tells Bethesda-Chevy Chase Class of School Benefits.

Circumstances have conspired to provide the young men and women graduating today with peculiar advantages, Principal Thomas W. Pyle declared in his address at the graduation exercices of Bethesda-Chevy Chase Senior High School last night. They have been able to remain in high school to graduate, a privilege denied to more than three-fourths of our population, he said.

In addition, never before has such an opportunity been offered to know the world in which we live, with radio, the press and motion pictures. The modern school with its extended opportunity to study and discuss builds understanding," he said.

Principal Pyle pointed out that to extend the benefits of high school education to the boys and girls who are unable to have its advantages now and to reduce the size of class rooms to provide genuine individualized instruction would provide work for 1,500,000 men and women teachers.

Blanton Mails Red Queries To Teachers

Requests Information to 'Obviate Hearing and to Save Time.'

Some Members of Board Resent Questionnaire; Await Meeting.

With a quetionnaire asking Washington's public school teachers their personal views on communism, religion and economics, Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, yesterday launched a new investigation of the District school system, which he has charged with "red" tendencies.

The questionnaire, enclosed in a franked envelope with another franked envelope for reply, reached many of the teachers yesterday, and precipitated a new flare in the relations between Blanton, as chairman of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, and school officials.

Blanton asked the teachers such questions as:

"Do you believe in any of the doctrines of communism; if so, which?"

"Do you bleieve in God?"

"Do you believe in some form of religion?"

"Have you been to Russia? Did you attend school there?"

Obtained Approval.

Altough it was learned last night that Blanton obtained the approval of certain members of his committee before he placed the questionnaire in the mails, it was forwarded as a message from him.

He said he was requesting the information in this form "to obviate a hearing and to save you the time and inconvenience of coming before us in person."

Many of the teachers, while questioning Blanton's authority to demand information on what they consider personal matters, considered the wording of the committee chairman's note a threat.

Fearing the publicity of an appearance before "us," as well as their jobs, some of them last night said they would fill in the answers and mail the questionnaire back.

Others to Refuse.

Others said they would refuse. Still others said they would do nothing until they had word from the Board of Education.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the board, indicated last night a special meeting of the board would be called to act on the matter. She said she planned to talk to several of the members about it last night.

"As far as I am personally concerned," she said, "any teacher who doesn't want to answer the questions doesn't need to."

Other board members said they resented the questionnaire, but fould not comment until the board meets.

All teachers who received questionnaires, when interviewed, declined to comment if their names were to be used.

One, who had talked with several colleagues who also had questionnaires in their mail boxes when they returned from school yesterday afternoon, said the teachers are "most incensed" about it. It placed them all under suspicion, on the subject of communism, she said.

Another instructor said:

"The questions are catchy. I don't see how you can answer them without getting in trouble."

Working on How to Teach Play

Joey Kaufman, former George Washington University athlete, shows youths training for jobs as summer playground directors how a bar really should be chinned.

Boys 'in Training' to Direct Youth of City at Playgrounds

About 50 School Athletes Learn to Toss Horseshoes, Chin the Bar, at Institute to Prepare Them for Summer Duty.

A training school for the youths who will direct Washington's boys and girls in the playgrounds of the city was in its second day yesterday and half a hundred husky youths in duck trousers and sport shirts trotted out on McMillan Playground to learn to do the things they are going to teach others to do this summer.

They learned how to grip a horseshoe correctly.

They learned the correct way to chin a bar.

Of course, most of the boys already knew how to do all these things. But Director Dick Tennyson, who has charge of training the youths in the Summer Playground Institute, thought the boys ought to practice up a bit and smooth over the rough spots before the playgrounds open July 1. Most of the youths are college athletes and some were high school athletes.

But it was harder for some of them to pitch horseshoes—correctly as they were pitched in front of the old livery stables and as the boys are going to teach the children of Washington to toss them. Football players who could hit a dime on a forward pass with a football while they were in college couldn't come within feet of making a ringer.

But they'll learn.

The institute will last a week. Track instructors will be brought to address them. And baseball players. And doctors to teach them first-aid methods.

The directors who will be sent to the city's nearly 100 playgrounds are hired for two months to help handle the children who flock there in summer when all time is playtime.

Trolley Routes' Minor Changes In Effect Today

Because of progress in street car track changes in the downtown area, minor shifts in routes of several lines will go into effect today and continue for several weeks, it was announced yesterday by Robert Dougan, assistant to the preisdent of the Capital Transit Co.

Street cars, in-bound from Berwyn, Belasville and Mount Rainier have been following G street, in the downtown area, west to the stub end near Fifteenth street. Beginning today, these cars will go south on Fifth street to F, west to Fourteenth street, then north to G street. The return trip will be made east along G street.

This change was caused by the building of a connection in the tracks on G street into Fifteenth street.

Senate Firm On D. C. Fund Of $5,700,000

Another Conference Is Due on Bill Today or Tomorrow.

Senate conferees on the District appropriation bill indicated last night they will stand firm for a Federal contribution of $5,700,000, after the Senate had adopted a motion by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, that its managers insist upon their amendments.

The Senate also agreed to another conference as a result of the House action on Monday, although a formal disagreement had previously been signed. The conference had not been scheduled last night, but it was expected to be held today or tomorrow.

The lump sum remains the only controversial issue before the conferees as the restriction on outside employment was voted down by the House, and the Senate is making no particular fight to retain the character education funds.

Committee clerks figured yesterday that the House, while concurring in 50 Senate amendments and insisting upon eliminating 33, had the best of the proposed compromise from two financial points of view.

Some $495,000 would be added to the District bill by the Senate amendments accepted by the House, while about $700,000 would be deducted if the House removes the 33 amendments and effects compromises on 4 other Senate increases.

Moreover, the anticipated income of the District for the fiscal year 1937 would be cut $1,500,000, threatening the District government with a deficit if the Senate accepts the House offer to split the differences on the lump-sum payment.

The Senate conferees have indicated they would be willing to yield on a reasonable number of their minor amendments to insure passage of a District bill instead of a continuing resolution, but they will stand firm on the Federal contribution unless the House managers agree to establishment of a fiscal relations commission.

Even then, it is believed, they will not accept the $4,200,000 offer of the House. The lowest alternative proposal to come from Senator Thomas has been $5,000,000, and that was coupled with the fiscal relations commission resolution, which the chairman of the House conferees rejected.

Derrick

A robber with ambitions to rise in the world victimized Rufus E. Miller, contractor, of the 600 block of L street northwest, police learned last night.

The thief stole a hoist-tower for construction jobs, including the car and scaffolding; 25 wheel-barrows and 25 short-handle dshovels. The equipment was being used on a site in the 600 block of Q street northwest.

Patrolmen busied themselves last night searching for the burglar.

Widow's Claim Of $3,000 Fails To Pass House

Bill Raises Question of Responsibility in D. C. Damage Cases.

The old fiscal question of who should pay the bills, the District or the Federal Government, arose once more last night while the House was in session on the private calendar.

A bill seeking $3,000 damages from the Federal Government was presented in behalf of Mrs. Mary E. Roney, of 3942 Livingston street, whose husband, George Roney, was killed in October, 1930, at Connecticut avenue and Livingston street by a "police car operating at an excessive rate of speed," which struck him as it "passed a street car from which he was alighting." The bill failed to carry.

Mrs. Roney already has been awarded $5,000 by the District Government, which is the most she can collect under the law from this source.

Representative Hancock Republican), of Illinois, opposed award of the money, insisting that the District should pay the additional $3,000.

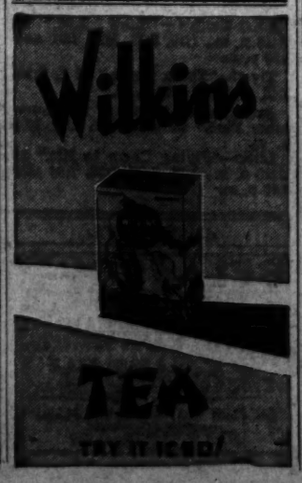
The case was defended by Representative Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland. Finally it was brought to a vote, and the bill carried, 48 to 38, with Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, voting with the minority.

Hancock then raised the point of "no quorum" and Acting Floor Leader O'Connor (Democrat) moved for adjournment.

Driver of 'Lemon' Auto Files Assault Charge

Bernon Haynes, 23, of 2121 First street northwest, who drives an automobile of popular make around the District painted with lemons, yesterday obtained a warrant charging an employe of the Barry-Pate Motor Co. with simple assault.

He complained to the district attorney that he parked his car in front of the company's premises in the 1100 block of Connecticut avenue. A few minutes later the employe struck him, he asserted. The warrant was issued against Jack McCue.



1,000 Women Hear Miss Perkins Outline Social Security Policy

Typical Case Described by Secretary of Labor in Address to District Federation of Women's Clubs Annual Luncheon.

Susie Smith, of New Hampshire, was introduced yesterday by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins to a ballroom packed with Washington's most prominent clubwomen.

"Susie," said Miss Perkins, describing the social security act," works and earns $12 a week. She has three daughters. Her husband died a year ago. She gets $42 a month under her State's plan for dependent children during their infancy."

"Later she loses her job and draws $6 a week benefit, under unemployment compensation, and may continue to draw this sum for 16 weeks. While drawing this benefit, the State employment service, affiliated with the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor, is making every effort to find a new job for Susie.

"Susie Smith can face the future without fear of dependency in her old age. The provisions of the act will permit her to give up her job at 65 with the assurance of a monthly income that will come to her as her right during her remaining years.

"If she has earned an average annual wage of $600, she will receive $25 per month, and if she lives with one of her now grown children, this will spell independence to her. If she has to live alone she may, under the old-age assistance provisions of the act, receive additional aid commensurate with her needs."

Outlining progress made to date in affording social security to the masses, Miss Perkins reported:

Approval of old-age assistance plans in 31 States and the District of Columbia, affecting 628,000 persons.

Approval of aid-to-the-blind programs in 20 States and the District, affecting 21,000 persons.

Approval of aid for dependent children, affecting $185,000 individuals, in 18 States and the District.

Approval of unemployment compensation plans in 11 States and the District which will benefit approximately 40 per cent of the workers to be covered in the country.

Joan Crawford Cultivates Her Singing Voice

Ponselle Asked to Listen; Flagg Strikes a Snag; Celluloid Chatter.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 16.—Said Joan Crawford, actress, to Rosa Ponselle, prima donna: "You must come hear me sing sometime."

Ponselle not only agreed but set a date, which is just one more indication that Crawford, who stormed the movie business as a flaming flapper of the class of 1925, may wind up warbling opera—or at least movie versions of opera.

At 28 the former chorus girl (nee Mary Fay LeSueur in San Antonio, Tex.), has three years of high-powered vocal training behind her, plus the assurance of her instructor, Signor Morando, that she has a fine soprano voice.

Nobody took her seriously when she began reaching for high notes and memorizing French, German and Italian scores, but the suspicion is dawning that she may turn out to be a singer, after all.

Crawford went in for upper-case art about 1929 when she married Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and at the same time her picture parts began a transition from the hi-de-ho type to high drama.

Her operatic aspirations date from 1933, the year she divorced Fairbanks, but there's no reason to suppose any connection between the two events, since Franchot, Tone has borne up well enough.

At any rate Ponselle will hear and criticize the Crawford voice as soon as the actress has finished her current picture.

W. C. Fields' Next.

Illness of W. C. Fields didn't discourage scouts hunting a new story for the comedian. While Fields, stricken with pneumonia, lay under an oxygen tent in a Riverside, Calif., hospital, Paramount announced the purchase of a yarn called "Don't Look Now," to go into production as soon as he's recovered.

James Montgomery Flagg is out $10 because Norma Shearer, (Mrs. Irving Thalberg) never forgets a routine. Flagg visited the high-priced star in her dressing room, and as is his custom, hauled out his drawing kit and made a crayon sketch of her.

"That'll be $10, please," said Shearer when he had finished.

"Huh?"

"You promised to pay me $10 every day I posed, and as far as I know you haven't cancelled," she replied. Then Flagg remembered. Shearer used to model for him in New York years ago, before she broke into pictures, and a 10-spot was her daily fee. He dug up the saw-buck.

New Hollywood Game.

Owen Davis, jr., is the advance agent for one of those Hollywood games. Player No. 1 names a picture title and the pack try to guess whom it describes. Examples, (but not by Davis): "Snow-bound."—Greta Garbo; "Born to Fight."—George Raft; "Show Them No Mercy,"—the Marx brothers. You can go on from there.

Tap-dancing Eleanor Powell arranged a birthday surprise party for her 64-year-old grandmother by remote control. Grandmother, Sue Torrey, lives in Westchester, N. Y. Powell arranged for entertainment and food, and invited guests by telephone and telegram from Hollywood.

Powell, incidentally, has gone Hollywood and is planning to build a house.

Cutting Room Scraps.

John Boles will play the Louis-Schmeling fight as a one-night stand. He'll fly to New York Wednesday, and return to Hollywood Friday morning.

Herbert Marshall is latest to go in for the bucolic life. He has purchased a 40-acre citrus ranch in San Diego County, and says he'll eventually retire as a fruit farmer.

Alice Faye will hurry off to New York as soon as she finishes "Sing, Baby, Sing," about July 1. Incidentally, Julius Tannen says that if the picture doesn't draw they can strike out the "Baby" and bill it as "Sing Sing."

Harvey Stephens is building a glider and hopes to sail from a 4,000-foot mountain near Lake Arrowhead to San Diego.

Gladys George's "Valient Is the Word for Carrie" has already struck a title-switch. Its "With Banners Blowing" now.

C. C. (Cash and Carry) Pyle reported ill here.

Louis B. Mayer scored a hole in one.

Liam O'Flaherty, Irishman who wrote "The Informer," will screen write Columbia's "Submarine."

Elsie Janis, who single-handed did as much for the A. E. F., I suppose, as any group of entertainers, did not get a bonus bond or check . . . She would not have taken it, anyway . . . The Janis girl's bonus was distilled in her heart in 1917 . . . She tells you that it is the only experience in her life that she likes to remember . . . Irving Berlin received his bonus and check while he and Mrs. Berlin were awaiting Sir Stork at Doctors Hospital . . . Bob Christenberry, Hotel Astor manager, who lost an arm with the Fifth Marines, rated $1,500 . . . Jack Waldron, master of ceremonies at the Hollywood, got $1,600 based on his overseas service with the Seventy-seventh . . . Mario Chamlee, the opera singer, a veteran of the Seventy-seventh, got $1,600 . . . Earl Carroll, flying with the First Divisional Wing (Vernon Castle was one of his instructors at Fort Worth), rated $828.

Mobsters point him out as one of the menaces of a college education . . . Laurence Stallings, Producer Max Gordon, Larry Schwab, Jack Benny, M. S. About the Showshops

A CONFIDENTIAL week-end tip came true yesterday afternoon with the announcement by Managing Director Jack Thoman that the Belasco Theater will end its season on Saturday night of this week. This will bring to an end the second successful season of operating the famous old Lafayette Square playhouse as an outlet primarily for foreign-made films, under the general direction of Matty Radin.

BELL.

During its two years of operation as one of the important links in the Radin chain, the Belasco has brought many notable films to town which otherwise might never have been seen in the Capital and, from time to time, has revived distinguished native productions of earlier years. It has enjoyed a consistently profitable patronage, its flush weeks having more than made up for the deficiencies of its feeble ones. The management requests the privilege of extending its gratitude to the public for this generous support and at the same time takes occasion to pledge itself to even greater achievements next season.

It is the present expectation to reopen the Belasco for the 1936-37 season some time late in August, definite announcement of which will be made in due time.

• • • •

On the stage bill, headlined in person by Edgar Kennedy, screen comedian, at the Earle, beginning Friday, will be Loretta Lee, deep-throated songstress from the South, whose rich contralto has become familiar to numberless listeners over the Columbia Broadcasting System during the past three years. Miss Lee made her radio debut over the Columbia network in January, 1933, and most recently has been heard in the "Hit Parade" series and "Good Evening Serenade" programs. The charm of her work is in no way impaired by the fact that her name is neither Loretta nor Lee, away from her professional engagements. It is Margaret Viegas, a name held in high esteem in New Orleans, where her father has compiled a fine record as judge of the juvenile court.

• • • •

Whether "Show Boat," starring Irene Dunne and enlisting the services of a ne plus ultra cast, led by Charles Winninger, Helen Morgan, Allan Jones, Helen Westley and Paul Robeson, is held for a fifth consecutive week at RKO-Keith's or not—and it looks very much as if it would be—the new issue of "The March of Time" will be added to the bill on Friday. This is the sixth issue of the second year that will be coming along, and it deals with three topics of widespread interest—the political scene in Austria, as Otto awaits a call to the throne and both Germany and Italy watch anxiously from the sidelines; the Texas Centennial, in celebration of which Fort Worth and Dallas are slashing at each other's throats, and Juvenile Delinquency, the case history of a youth "from the other side of the railroad tracks." It is this last item that the Community Chest is particularly anxious for all Washingtonians to see, since it deals with a problem with which the Chest is actively wrestling.

• • • •

One learns from Tom Kearns, doing a little avant couriering on behalf of the forthcoming engagement of Edgar Kennedy at the Earle, that Ed is not arriving in Washington until early Friday morning on account of because he is staying in New York to see the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling embroglio Thursday night. This brought up the matter of the Kennedy background and dragged out into the light the fact that the screen comedian formerly was heavyweight boxing champion of the Pacific Coast and is a brother of Tom Kennedy, also a scrapper, whose buffetted schnozzola is one of the best known of the cinema's twisted probosces, or proboscises, or whatever it is, or they are. This is Mr. Kennedy's first trip East and Mr. Kearns tells me New York had him hanging on the ropes the first couple of rounds!

Dots and Dashes.

The announcement of the Belasco's closing permits the earlier announcement that the Ellen Waller School of Dance will give its early summer recital in the Belasco on Monday night at 8:30 to make sense . . . It also lets down the bars for a quotation from a letter just to hand from Charlotte B. Van Deusen, 1330 L street, who complains with some vigor that something ought to be done about the uncomfortable seats in Mr. Radin's International Cinema . . . "Nelson Eddy could come there in person and I wouldn't go if I had to sit on one of those old seats again—they remind me of grandma's old couch with the broken spring," says she . . . Was it in the solarium? . . . But that was that old Oscar & Etheldreda act and had nothing to do with the Belasco . . . Forney Reese would like you to know that Phil Hayden is taking a group of his dancers to the Arts Club tomorrow night for a recital in the club's Garden Theater . . . And John Sikken, one of the better of the local Booths, leaves a note on the desk calling attention to the fact that Nell Orton of the Black-friars Guild of Washington, will play the Jane Cowl role in "Smilin' Thru," when that sentimental romance is produced as second of the Summer Festival programs in the National Sylvan Theater on June 23 . . . That would be under the joint auspices of the Community Center Department and the Office of National Capital Parks . . . John also leaves a picture of Miss Orton from which one judges that she will do the Cowl role ample visual justice . . . As this is written, I am making mind bets that both "Show Boat" and "Fury", at the Palace, will be held for a fifth and second week, respectively . . . If not, Bobby Breen and Henry Armetta in "Let's Sing Again," at the former, and "Private Number," with Loretta Young and Robert Taylor, at the latter, come Friday . . . They are prescreening the "Private Number" item today at 1:30 in the Fox Film Exchange . . . The private preview of "Sins of Man" yesterday sent the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drayma desks out into the humidity with tears splashing off the ends of their noses—so I hear.

Back in Edgar Kennedy's fighting days a tremendous number of fans used to turn out to see the Kennedy warrin'. Or does that belong in real estate?

National

S. F. Cochran presents the students of the National Academy of Stage Training in a program of dramatic works and dances, under the general direction of Maurice Greet and Mildred Coleman. At the National Theater. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM.

"DADDY LONG-LEGS," first act of the drama by Jean Webster.

"ON THE AIR," comedy in one act by Howard Reed, directed by Mildred Coleman.

DANCE PROGRAM, routined and directed by Marion D. Venable, with costumes by Dorothy Colt, piano accompaniment by Alice Applegate and Blanche Russell.

"IT'S A LONG LANE," drama in one act by Marpin Gentry and Barrett Whitmn, directed by Mildred Coleman.

"TURN TO THE RIGHT," first act of the comedy-drama by Winchell Smith and Jack Hazzard.

Offerng two excerpts from modern playwriting, two one-act plays and a brief dance recital, the National Academy of Stage Training presented another of its periodic term-end programs before an enthusiastic audience last evening at the National Theater.

Following the last dramatic work the personnel assembled on the stage for the presentation by Maurice Greet, director of the academy, of five diplomas to graduating students. Those receiving their thespian sheepskins were Justine M. Corby, Bettsy Smith, David A. Levine, Billie Stull and Roland Gaylord.

At the top of the dramatic list should be placed Howard Reed's "On the Air," a comedy of broadcasting. Margaret Mary Edmonston, Leah Cannon, Alice Sturtevant and Katherine Hyde impersonated these wondering ladies, while Dollie Slaughter was a very patient announcer and Catharine Ryan a most helpful artiste.

"It's a Long Lane" is a drama of starger character, of the revival of an old love and the exposure of bitter hypocrisy. Edward A. Finlayson creditably played the crash-broken husband, with Sonia Nordholm as the wife and Justine Corby the erstwhile fiancee.

The two selections from full-length drama, apart from their inevitable incompleteness of story and development, were creditably don, with that from "Turn to the Right" the better presented. Here Malvin Plunkett and Dale Etter outshone their fellows, although Bettsy Smith, Katherine Birney and Estherbelle McHarg commendably represented the distaff side.

In the act one of "Daddy Long-Legs," Betty Brunstetter made a very nice Judy Abbott, with Roland Garland a rather youthful but otherwise acceptable eJrvis Pendleton. Miss Nordholm and Marcella Bertram did the Misses Lippett.

Dancing Scores.

Good as were the plays, better still were the dances stage dby Marion D. Venable, in eight short scenes. Outstanding was the Indian suite, "To the Sun," rendered more authentic through the tom-tom accompaniment by Chief Deer Foot. "At the Fountain" was a ballet of gossamer imagery, with Evelyn Foster an accomplished danseuse. Other pleasing specialties were offered by Jacqueline Lanier, Doris Call and Max Klotz. Miss Venable and Paul Fox presented a novelty tango as an unexpected treat.

Among those appearing on the evening's program were:

Dancers—Frances Miller, Billie Stull, Nancy Virginia Brumbaugh, Jone Dennis, An Heron Reeves, Helene Nash, Eleanor Ray, Betty Hall, Mary Jo Hall, Betty June Hollander, Idelyn Kass, Betty Sue Herwig, Virginia Herwig, Gladys Gibson, Ruth Klotz, Lillian Scott, Kathryn Resch, Ruena Dubel, Martha Scott, Mary Teresa Heveran, Mary Aires, Yvonne Julihn, Frances Miller, Phyllis Palmer, Patsy Palmer, oJan Westwater, Betty Brunstetter.

Watching Them Make Pictures. .

Hollywood, June 16.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are playing in a winter's snow sequence for the flicker "I Won't Dance," and you can bet that it is a hot summer afternoon, you win the bet.

Astaire stands on a studio mountain made of artificial snow. He is wearing a fur-lined overcoat, and Ginger is wearing a fur coat. The large studio lights make the sound stage hot. Then Fred and Ginger are to sing and do a dance. They must pretend to be freezing while doing the routine. Sometimes they try to make performers earn their salaries.

Ginger Rogers.

Director George Stevens rehearses the number with Astaire and Rogers. The man at the piano pounds away. The electricians sit around watching, eating ice cream. It is nice to watch Astaire and Rogers, for they sing and dance many times. It is like a long vaudeville show.

• • • •

They are now singing a Jerome Kern song, "A Fine Romance," with lyric by Dorothy Fields. I am told that Kern calls this "a sardonic love song." Anyway, it is a delightful tune and an interesting lyric. Going away, I remember the lines: "You're calmer than the seals in the Arctic Ocean. At least, they flop their fins to express emotion." Anyway, you'll like the number when you see it. I did.

After many rehearsals, part of this number is filmed to Director Stevens' satisfaction. Astaire takes off his fur-lined coat, his valet gives him his straw hat, and Fred walks off the sound stage, out into the hot sun to keep cool.

• • • •

Ginger Rogers' stand-in is Marie Osborne. Years ago, Ginger's mother, Lela Rogers, wrote scenarios for the child star, Baby Marie Osborne. It is Lela who got Marie Osborne a stock contract at Radio Pictures.

Miss Osborne is not bitter at the world over her present status. She is a little taller than Ginger, shapely and attractive. She told me her story.

Baby Marie Osborne was a star when she was 6 and 7 years old. Her salary—"I hear it was as high as $750 a week," she said, "but I have an old contract at home which called for $450 a week." Miss Osborne explained that there was no State law then which took care of a child's salary. All the money she made was spent.

Then Baby Marie reached the "awkward age," the time terrible for all kid performers. She left the screen. She went to grammar school and high school. Then she got married to Frank Dempsey, a nonprofessional. A home became her career. She has a daughter, Joan, 4.

• • • •

She is about to be legally separated from her husband. Several years ago, when she decided to go back to work, she tried to return to the work she knew—the movies. Director Henry King, who knew her when she was a star, gave her extra work in the flicker "Carolina." She has been in pictures since, making an earnest effort to get somewhere.

Asked if she remembered any of her kid flickers, she answered: "All I remember are certain scenes that I had fun making, like a scene in which I played on a swing or one in which I got into mischief." Concerning her daughter, Joan, Miss Osborne said: "I don't want her to do picture work at all."

Carl Reynolds' Pinch Home Run Wins for Nats in Tenth, 9 to 8

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Detroit, Mich., June 16.

Out here where Joe Louis' fighting career was spawned in the city back lots that led to the amateur tournaments, folks are waiting with some impatience for the Detroit Negro to declare the round in which he will stiffen Max Schmeling on Thursday evening.

POVICH.

This is the hour when the Brown Bomber usually confides to his Boswells among Detroit newspapermen just how many rounds he expects to be employed in the act of knocking out the hapless wight who happens to be in the same ring with him. To Detroiters, who regard Joe Louis as something of a composite of Jack Dempsey, Sam Langford and Gene Tunney, boasting the best features of each, the actual result of the Schmeling fight is a foregone conclusion.

But, heretofore, Louis has always relayed to his Detroit public the exact round in which he promises to end his important engagements. The present delay is just a bit unfathomable here. Joe never did wait this long before.

At that the Brown Bomber has probably spoiled the folks here. He has never hit matters right on the hickey with his predictions, but he's come close enough to inspire city-wide confidence in his prognostications. He said he'd knock out Carnera in the fifth round, and it required six. Louis apologised all over the place for his error, but, naturally, his tardiness was forgiven.

Before the Baer fight, he had arranged for his wedding to take place a half-hour after he climbed through the ropes against Baer at 10 p. m. He figured he'd need 15 minutes to lick Baer and 15 more minutes to get dressed, take his shower and be at the appointed place for the nuptials, he said.

In an eleventh-hour change in plans, he decided to get married before the fight, but he didn't let that interrupt his schedule in the Baer engagement. He didn't stiffen Baer in 15 minutes, like he promised, though he stepped matters up a bit and knocked Baer out in 14 minutes and 50 seconds.

So naturally the folks out here place great store by the Bomber's advance info on his battles and with the Schmeling fight coming on are just a bit curious.

It isn't ego, braggadocio or blatancy on Louis' part when he proceeds to call the round he'll win in, according to my friend, Mr. W. W. Edgar, sports editor of the Detroit Free Press, who knows Joe Louis better than any other white man and who in turn is regarded by Louis as the No. 1 Nordic.

It's simply naivetie on the part of Louis, says Mistah Edgar, whose Golden Gloves tournaments first turned the Negro up as a fighting machine of extreme ability. Joe Louis is just plain folks, with an implicit faith in the persuasive powers of his two fists, according to Mistah Edgar, and he doesn't mean to act smart when he says he is going to knock somebody out in round one, round two or round three, as the case may be.

Joe Louis is, indeed, a simple soul, Mistah Edgar would have you know. He can read only a little bit. The writing of anything but his name is a severe task for the Bomber. His faith in the telephone is almost childish. After he uses the dial, he expects the party on the other end to know instantly who is calling without the formality of introducing himself.

Though fame came to him swiftly, Joe Louis' respect for Mistah Edgar remains almost worshipful. Mistah Edgar repeats a telephone conversation with Louis:

"The night he was to leave for his Lakewood camp, I was in the office and my telephone rang. I said 'Hello' and the voice on the other end said:

"'Can I come down to your office for a while?'"

"I had a hunch it was Joe but I pretended not to know.

"Well," I said, "I am a very busy man and I can't have every Tom, Dick and Harry running in here, who is this?"

"'The Bummer,' he said, that's either his pronunciation or his interpretation—I'm not sure which—of the Bomber.

"I said, the Bummer, eh? Well, you can come down if you'll promise to keep quiet.

"Pretty soon Louis came in. He didn't want anything in particular. He just wanted to sit around and watch me work. He'd stay for hours doing that, if I'd let him."

In Short—

The guy has a sense of humor, according to Mistah Edgar . . . when they told Louis that Jack Dempsey would be in Baer's corner that night in Yankee Stadium, the Negro only smiled. "The rules say Dempsey can't hit me, doan they?" He grinned. Mistah Edgar reveals that Louis has earned $300,000 in purses and another $50,000 from advertising, but he is by no means rich . . . his managers have netted $100,000 from their one-third interest . . . he has paid the Government $46,0000 in income taxes . . . he has paid Jack Blackburn $25,000 for training services . . . his youngest sister's education and clothes have cost Louis $3,000 . . . his mother, for whom he bought a farm and two automobiles, has benefited to the extent of $68,000 and the rest of his family has been given $12,000 . . . autographed pictures of himself for his fans have cost him $24,000 in two years and after buying a Chicago apartment house and two automobiles for himself his bank account today is, in round figures, $18,000.

Max Certain He'll Stop Bomber

German Says He Knows Weakness in His Foe's Armament.

Maps Careful Plans for Bout; Will Rely on His Infighting.

By Bill McCormick,

A Staff Correspondent.

Max Schmeling's Training Camp, Napanoch, N. Y., June 16.—Either Max Schmeling has been very scientifically built up to a terrible letdown—or the writer has set himself up for a bad fall.

After watching Der Schlager go through his final workout in preparation for his public appearance against Joe Louis in New York Thursday, I cannot conceive of Schmeling's lasting more than two or possibly three rounds against the vicious Tan Tornado from Detroit.

Neither can it be denied that Max is in the best possible physical condition—the proverbial pink. That is the result of the scientific build up, a process which has required six weeks of intensive effort, 19 days of hard workouts against sparmates, hundreds of miles of laborious road work, hours of bag punching and whatever else happened behind the scenes.

Lost Labor.

All that hard work seems destined to be nullified within a few minutes by the venomous fists of a pouty-lipped Negro who sights killing shots through reptilian eyes. In other words, to your correspondent—and practically everyone else concerned—the training of Napanoch seems to have been love's labor lost.

Two voices cry out in the wilderness against counting Schmeling out before he has had a chance to demonstrate his ability to cope with the destructive machine that is Louis. They are the voices of Schmeling himself and his manager, Joe Jacobs.

"I am not hufraid uff Louis," Schmeling insists, "und I giff him goot fight. I dun't make predictions about my fights, but I think I win. Anyway, de best man will win."

Jacobs is more positive in his declarations.

"Schmeling by a knockout in nine rounds," he declares from behind the ever-present stogie and the smoke screen it throws up. "We have spotted the weakness in Joe's armor, and we'll puncture it."

Schmelnig's insistence that he is not afraid of Louis either is sincere or Max is an even better actor than his wife, beauteous Anny Ondra, of the German flickers. He speaks the words with a simplicity and quietness that carry conviction.

No Bravado.

There is about Schmeling none of the blustery bravado with which Baer once declared he feared not Louis. There is in his voice none of the awe with which Kingfish Levinsky always has spoken of the Brown Bomber. There is none of the hesitancy with which Primo Carnera maintained he was not frightened by the prospect of facing the Detroit destroyer.

Unless Schmeling is a consummate actor and hiding his true feelings, Louis will, for the first time since he tangled with Natie Brown, be facing an opponent who enters the ring without trepidation. Brown stayed around for 10 rounds with Louis, and might have done better had he not been floored for a nine-count in the first round. The psychological effect of facing a man who is not wilted before a single punch is fired may have an effect on Louis, although it is doubtful.

Today's workout, declared by observers one of Schmeling's best, showed the former champion to be almost seconds slower than Louis and, at times, ridiculously easy to hit with a left hand, which means suicide against the Darky from Detroit.

Schmeling is weaving and bobbing, but only to avoid punches. He does not employ a weave to put him within firing range and set himself Louis midriff at close quarters, as sey. Der Schlager is holding his right hand cocked and always ready to throw and seems to toss it with Yankee Star Hits No. 13 and 14; But Tribe Is Winner, 8-4.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 16.—The Indians made the opener of the league-leading New York Yankees' Western invasion an unsuccessful one today, clubbing Lefty Gomez from the mound in a hurry, and going on to an 8-to-4 victory.

Not even Lou Gehrig's thirteenth and fourteenth homers of the year, and the tenth round-trip clout for Bill Dickey, back in the lineup for the first time since he was injured in Boston two weeks ago, could stop the Indians.

For Gomez, it was the fifth time in his last six starts that he failed to go the route.

Harris May Recall CohenFrom 'Nooga

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Mich., June 16.—Desperate in an effort to bolster his pitching staff, Manager Bucky Harris is casting covetous glances at the leading pitchers with the Nats' Chattanooga farm.

The left-handed Sid Cohen, given a trial by the Nats in the spring of 1935, is Harris' chief objetcive. He hopes to gain the permission of Owner Clark Griffith to recall Cohen to the Nats within a few days.

Foxx Clouts Two, Total Now 16; But Bosox Bow, 4 to 2.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 16.—Two long home runs by Jimmy Foxx, his fifteenth and sixteenth of the season, were not enough against the White Sox today as Chicago pounded Bob Grove from the mound and beat Boston, 4 to 2.

Foxx hit his first homer over the roof of the left-field pavilion in the fourth. It was the second time he accomplished this feat, and he is the only player in baseball ever to hit a ball over the far distant stand in Comiskey Park. Foxx smashed his second circuit drive into the same stand in centerfield, just to the left of the centerfield bleachers.

Merritt (Sugar) Cain held the Red Sox to eight hits to win his fifth game of the season. The White Sox knocked Grove out in the sixth inning, then made nine hits off Grove, Jack Wilson and Fred Ostermueller. It was Grove's second loss of the year.

They Starred in First Game for Nats

Outfielder Ben Chapman, left, and Pitcher Joe Cascarella, newest Nat acquisitions, pose just before yesterday's game with Detroit, which they helped to win. Cascarella was credited with the victory, while Chapman got a hit and scored two runs.

Harris Pleased With Team's New Talent

By a Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, June 16.—Washington's two recent acquisitions, Outfielder Ben Chapman and Pitcher Joe Cascarella, conducted themselves in a manner becoming big leaguers in their debuts with the Nats today.

Despite only one hit and a walk in six times at bat, Chapman justified Manager Harris' faith in him by stealing a base cleanly and roaming to all parts of centerfield.

Chapman's steal of second in the seventh inning was vividly reminiscent of 1932, when the fleet-footed outfielder set a modern record with 61 thefts. He stole a long lead on the pitcher and scampered down the base line with such speed he could have made the bag standing up, despite a good throw by Catcher Hayworth.

Cascarella made good at his first asking as a relief pitcher. After a poor start when he pitched a double to the first batter he faced in the seventh, he stopped the Tigers cold. The tying run, on second base with none out, remained there when the next three batters couldn't get the ball out of the infield.

In his three-inning shift, Cascarella allowed only two hits and struck out four, twice slipping a perfect third strike past the batter.

Manager Bucky Harris was impressed today by Chapman's willingness to lead off the batting order for the Nats, and the spirit which the former Yankee brings to the club.

"We're only nine games back of the lead," said Chapman this morning. "Hell, that ain't much. Looks like we can win that pennant."

Baer-Gallagher May Meet in Baltimore

Marty Gallagher, Foggy Bottom's scrapping heavyweight, may fight Max Baer, former world's champion, in Baltimore July 22, The Post learned last night.

A Baltimore promoter, Ed Kurland, has offered Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, $10,000 for a match between the California "playboy" and either Gallagher or Al Ettore, Philadelphia boxer, managed by Lew Tendler.

Kurland said last night he preferred Gallagher, inasmuch as he was impressed with the big District slugger's recent 15-round victory over Bob Tow, Alexandrian, at Griffith Stadium.

Gallagher, who displayed the best form of his checkered career in his recent victory over Bob Tow, last night said he had not been approached by Kurland. He added, however, that such a bout was "just swell," and that he would be willing to meet the former heavyweight champion if the financial terms were attractive enough.

Simultaneous with the announcement that Gallagher was being considered as an opponent for Baer came the brisk challenge from Buck Everett for a match with Gallagher at Griffith Stadium. Everett, well known in local boxing circles, breezed into town last night from Asheville, N. C., with his manager, Jimmy Erwin, and requested a quick shot at the Foggy Bottom beak-buster. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn immediately took it under consideration.

Tigers Rally But Effort Is Futile

Score Twice in Their Half; Tying Run Left on Base.

Reynolds Delivers With Two Out; Kress and Bluege on Sacks.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Detroit, June 16.—Big Carl Reynolds, hurriedly called from the dugout to render assistance to the fast-wilting Nats in the tenth inning, beat back the Detroit Tigers this afternoon with a most emphatic home-run wallop over the leftfield scoreboard.

It was a well-tagged home run that Reynolds slammed against the pitching of Joe Sullivan, and it was well-timed, what with two mates resting on base, but it was fortunate indeed for Washington that three runs evolved from the wallop.

Because, the Tigers raging back at the pitching of Buck Newsom in the tenth inning, scored two runs on their own hook and all but wiped out the Nats' three-run lead before accepting defeat by the inflated figures of 9 to 8.

Kress' Error Costly.

Earl Whitehill, who couldn't hold leads 3-0 and 5-1, departed the scene in the seventh inning and the Tigers eventually tied the score at 6-6 against Joe Cascarella in the eighth when Red Kress' error permitted a run to score from third base.

The left-handed Sullivan, who had been turning the Nats back with great regularity after relieving Tommy Bridges back in the seventh inning, fell a victim to the lower part of the Nats' batting order when the teams went into the tenth locked in a 6-to-6 tie.

With two out, Red Kress drew an innocent-looking walk and Ossie Bluege breathed life into the threat with a single to center that pushed Kress to third. It was at this point that Harris called upon Reynolds. Sullivan was within one pitch of escaping the inning unscathed after slipping two strikes past Reynolds, but the ball game crashed down about the left-hander's ears when he tried to slip a high inside ball past the pinch hitter.

Rogell Hits Homer.

Once more in possession of a lead, Manager Harris turned to Buck Newsom to protect it. Newsom began with doubtful success when he pitched a home run to Billy Rogell that reduced the Nats' margin to

Palumbo Rides Flosilda to Victory Ending Long Losing Streak

Idle Worker Sets Pace, Runs 2d

Jockey Handles Mount Well; Daily Double Pays $71.60.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 16.—Sammy Palumbo, the meeting's leading jockey, emerged from a losing streak that held sway since last Saturday, to ride Flosilda to victory in the fetaure race today. Turning in a masterpiece of saddle work, Palumbo brought the popular Wrack—Marshmallow filly to the wire three lengths in front of Idle Worker, with Silvery Cloud third and another length away.

A crowd of 4,000 saw the interesting contest waged over the Charles Town course, 120 feet more than 6 furlongs, and the time of 117 was the best of the meeting for the route.

Palumbo rated Flosilda along in third position, while Idle Worker and Gay Bride battled for the pace-setting honors. Nearing the far turn, Palumbo asked his mount for speed and she responded with a rush that carried her by Idle Worker. In the stretch she easily held her rival safe.

Two horses had excuses in the race. Jockey Feltner on Silvery Cloud lost his stirrups on the backstretch and the horse finished a game third without help from the boy. Love Lost was ridden from pocket to pocket through the race and closed with a belated rush on the inside.

Flosilda was well liked by the majority of bettors and came through with a $6.40 mutuel.

Sleives Pride and Bright Girl teamed to produce a $71.60 pay-off in the daily double.

White Sweets Scores.

White Sweets, one that has failed often, found the right day in the first race and romped home at a $17.40 mutuel. Jockey Lou Pikor did the riding, or the guiding, and was easing up on his charge in the stretch. Justa Town took the measure of the favored Lady Penny for the place. Cingalese, which drew heavy play, was fourth in the field of seven. Sleive's Pride, a paddock tip, picked up 116 pounds and scampered to victory in the second race. The gelding finished a half-length in front of Mont Daisy, a $69 place proposition. Crossing Over, carrying the bulk of the money was third. Jockey B. Myers celebrated his return to action after a suspension by riding the winner, which paid $8.20.

Bright Girl made every post a winning one in graduating from the maiden class in the third race. Capably handled by Apprentice Jockey Root, the daughter of Bright Knight had a margin of two and a half lengths over Haymulus in the 7-furlong test. Third money went to Black Boo, a tip. The winner paid $9.60.

Aella, at a $6.60 mutuel, came with a rush to catch the tiring Lady Buck and win the fourth race. Radial was third in the field of six. Jockey Hernandez put up a good riding job on the winner.

Wise Money Winner.

Wise Money and Cerro fought it out for most of the 6½ furlongs of the sixth race, with the decision going to the former by a neck margin. Red Label was a nose away. The winner paid $8.20.

In a thrilling nose decision, Star Special won the final from Penang, with Brown Wren third. The winner paid $6.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE SWEETS, $17.40, $6.40, $3.00; JUSTA TOWN, $5.60, $2.80; LADY PENNY, $2.40.

WHITE SWEETS had speed to assume command at once, shook off LADY PENNY at the far turn and then drew clear to win easily. JUSTA TOWN, in close quarters soon after the break, gained steadily throughout the running, but was no match for the winner. LADY PENNY was hard ridden along the rail from the beginning. CINGALESE tired slightly after running forwardly. The others were outrun.

SLEIVES PRIDE, off slowly, was tiptoed into contention, assumed command after the opening furlong, ran CROSSING OVER into defeat and then continued gamely to resist bid of MONT DAISY. The latter, forwardly placed from the beginning, closed willingly. CROSSING OVER had something taken out of her racing with the winner and tired slowly. KENRIDGE went evenly. ABITIBI raced on the outside and faltered. MISS PATCHES showed a dull effort.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. The Hall Town. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:36½. Winner, Mrs. G. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT GIRL, $9.60, $5.60, $3.40; HAYMULUS, $12.80, $6.60; BLACK BOO, $2.60.

BRIGHT GIRL, hustled to the front at once, was steadied along while setting the pace and had something in reserve at the end. HAYMULUS, closest to the pace throughout, showed an excellent effort. BLACK BOO saved ground most of the way and had no excuses. ADA CRUZ went forwardly most of the way, but could not threaten. WRACKESS raced wide all the way and faltered in the closing sixteenth. The others were never factors.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $71.60.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:02½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AELLA, $6.60, $4.20, $3.40; LADY BUCK, $6.20, $4.60; RADIAL, $4.60.

AELLA, allowed to settle into stride while saving ground at the first turn, came with a rush in the closing sixteenth to be up in the concluding strides. LADY BUCK was sprinted to the front going to the first turn, shook off repeated challenges from RADIAL and tired badly in the last 50 yards. RADIAL, away last, had something taken out of her circling the field at the first turn, drew up to LADY BUCK on terms with LADY BUCK going to the far turn, and tired slowly. MAZYNIATA showed early speed and would not extend herself thereafter. BLONDE BAGGAGE trailed throughout.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. Down the Stretch. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31½. Off at 4:32. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOSILDA, $6.40, $4.60, $3.20; IDLE WORKER, $4.60, $3.80; SILVERY CLOUD, $4.60.

FLOSILDA, rated along and saving ground when outrun to the first turn, moved up sharply when put to a drive going to first turn, disposed of IDLE WORKER in the midstretch and drew clear. IDLE WORKER raced GAY BRIDE into defeat and continued gamely, but could not resist the winner. SILVERY CLOUD went forwardly all the way but Feltner lost stirrups and could not do his mount justice. LOVE LOST was allowed to drop out of it, was pulled up going into the backstretch, dropped back to last, saved ground to come through on the rail and was going fastest at the end. LADY DUNLIN raced wide at every turn and can do better. MISS FERN had early speed.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Boyce. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:01½. Off at 5:02. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE MONEY, $8.20, $5.40, $3.60; CERRO, $6.40, $4.00; RED LABEL, $3.60.

WISE MONEY, first away, was challenged throughout by CERRO, but saved ground all the way and rallied gamely to punishment in the closing eighth. CERRO, off poorly, was steered between horses to reach the pace setter, ran on the outside of him the remainder of the way. RED LABEL, saved ground after reaching the backstretch and closed resolutely under a drive. NO MISTAKE had a rough trip. HELEN BAB moved up menacingly in midstretch, but hung. PILE DRIVER had early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:33. Off at 5:35½. Winner, J. R. STAR SPECIAL, reserved off the pace of TUNEFUL and PENANG until swinging for the stretch, saved ground along the rail and came with excellent courage under a drive to be up in the concluding strides. PENANG was hard used while running with TUNEFUL, but closed willingly under pressure. BROWN WREN, outrun for a half, bettered her position steadily and came willingly at the end under strong riding tactics. THIS PLAY closed some ground in the late stages. COAT TAILS was taken in behind horses at the head of the stretch and had no chance to run.

Congressional Women Rally After Defeat to Win Team Title

Suffer First Loss; Score 37 Points

Chevy Chase Loses Title After Upsetting the New Champions.

By Dave Herman.

Despite a surprising 6-3 defeat at the hands of the defending titleholders, Chevy Chase, in the final match of the season yesterday at Manor, Congressional Country Club won the District women's first team golf championship.

It was Congressional's first setback of the season in the team matches, and never did a team fight harder to attempt to sweep the three battles than Chevy Chase, which was toppled from its throne after a two-year reign.

Thus Congressional wound up its campaign with a total of 37 points, and Chevy Chase, 5½ points behind going into the concluding matches, finished second with 35½.

Provide Upset.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton and Mrs. Harrison Brand provided an upset in the opening match by breaking even with Helen Dettweiler and Mrs. Elsie Haynes, of Congressional, and in the second set-to Mrs. Hume Wrong and Miss Louise Claytor held Mrs. Roland Mackenzie and Mrs. J. O. Rhyne to 1½ points.

Mrs. Landra B. Platt and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, of Chevy Chase, took 3 points from Mrs. J. F. Dowdall and Mrs. W. R. Bush.

Mrs. Rhyne turned in 38 and appeared to be well on her way to a good score until she ran into trouble on the back nine, finishing with an 85. Miss Dettweiler, Miss Houghton and Mrs. Platt had 86s.

Columbia walloped Army and Navy, 8½ to ½, and Manor defeated Kenwood, 5 to 4.

Beaver Dam Country Club won the second team championship with a total of 38 points, nosing out Columbia by a point.

Congressional, with 45 points, captured the third team title.

Tech's Losses by Graduation Will Reach 26 This Afternoon

By John R. Vosburgh.

By about 4 o'clock this afternoon Tech High's athletic loss by graduation for the year will have reached a grand total of 28. A goodly array of some of the city's foremost schoolboy stars will be included in the 20 youths who check out today in the footsteps of the half dozen who took their diplomas in February.

Coach Hap Hardell's football team continues to lose prominent members such as Francis (Dutch) Preller, All-High guard; John Burton, Amerigo Natella and Gerald Davis, rough and ready linemen.

Francis (Farmer) Crimmins, Tech's crushing All-High fullback, who was graduated in June, is bound for the University of Minnesota, incidentally, where football players of the Crimmins type are much sought after.

Mauris (Moe) Schulman, All-High center, who was graduated in February, is already out at Maryland. Louey Nowlin, backfield man, who gets his sheepskin today, will enter Alabama in the fall.

No Fun for Him.

Coach Rusty Thompson, of the basketball team, will hardly get a great deal of amusement out of the commencement exercises in view of the departure of Bill Rea, All-High guard; George Hahn, Wes Snow and Horace Lowe. Rea also was one of the city's foremost scholastic golfers.

The baseball team, however, escapes comparatively unscathed by the ravages of the graduation ceremonies, losing only Shortstop Hahn and the versatile Snow.

Harry March, one of the foremost athletes finishing school, is virtually a North Carolina University freshman at this writing. Interhigh high-jump champion hurdler and one of Washington's most promising young tennis players, March is seriously intent on going to the Tarheel institution.

Frank Haske, Frank Tolzman and Leo Wall, three of Tech's interhigh championship track and field point winners, will be getting through today also.

As a whole, however, Tech's teams are not suffering the damage that some of the other schools are, Eastern and Roosevelt, for instance.

Mungo Pounded, Bucs Down Brooklyn, 9 to 2

Brooklyn, June 16 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates knocked Van Lingle Mungo out of the box today in his first start since his return from his recent desertion of the Dodgers, and clubbed out a 9-to-2 win over the Brooklyns in the opener of their current Eastern invasion.

Reynolds Star As Nats Win Game, 9-8

two, and in a twinkling the Tigers had the tying run on base with none out—Fox singling to left and Gehringer drawing a walk.

But thus threatened, Newsom emerged as something of a hero. He negotiated the first out when Goslin grounded into a force-play at second on which Lewis made a clever one-handed stop, and he retired Simmons on a fly to Chapman, Fox scoring after the catch. But with the tying run still on first, Newsom sealed the Nats' victory by forcing Marvin Owen to pop to Bluege.

The Tigers outhit the Nats, 12 to 11, if that means anything.

A home run by Johnny Stone high into the upper deck of the leftfield bleachers started the Nats off on a three-run rally in the second inning and Kuhel promptly singled to center. Cliff Bolton slammed a tremendous triple over Al Simmons' head, scoring Kuhel and it was 3-0 when Bridges uncorked a wild pitch that scored Bolton.

Burns' double started the Tigers off to a run in the sixth, and in the seventh that made serious motions toward tying the score. Gehringer singled to right, Whitehill walked Goslin and pitched a double to Simmons that scored one run.

Enter Cascarella!

Then Harris called upon Cascarella, the acquisition from the Red Sox. The Italian's first pitch in a Washington uniform was no success. He pitched a double to Marvin Owen that scored two more runs and placed the tying run on second with none as yet out.

But from that point on, Cascarella was an extreme puzzle to the Tigers. They were still trailing, 6-5, at the end of the seventh and Cascarella, who was ultimately credited with the victory, might have had it in regulation innings had Kress cleanly played Simmons' grounder in the eighth when, with two out, Gehringer drew a walk and raced to third on Goslin's single to right. Gehringer scored on the muff and the boys had to work over time.

Tschiffely Cup Play to Start Tomorrow

30 Women Will Compete at Washington Country Club Course.

Play in the Tschiffely Cup Tournament will start tomorrow at Washington Golf and Country Club's course, with a field of 30 women golfers participating.

The tournament, 36-hole medal play handicap, will be concluded Friday. It is being held in honor of Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, donor of the cup, who, incidentally, is teeing off first with Mrs. E. E. Bailey at 9 o'clock. Pairings and starting times:

9, Mrs. W. E. Bailey and Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely; 9:05, Mrs. O. E. Roney and Mrs. R. N. Sutton; 9:10, Mrs. J. E. McCabe and Mrs. Walter Bailey; 9:15, Mrs. W. P. Draper and Mrs. C. H. Merrillat; 9:20, Mrs. Thomas DeLashmutt and Mrs. A. E. Kocherapergert; 9:25, Mrs. Felix Early and Mrs. W. C. Murphy.

9:30, Mrs. G. Freer and Mrs. Harold Willey; 9:35, Mrs. W. A. Graves and Mrs. C. R. Montague; 9:40, Mrs. Dorsey Gruver and Mrs. P. A. McLendon; 9:45, Mrs. E. E. Robinson and Mrs. E. V. Wilson; 9:50, Mrs. C. B. Molster and Mrs. W. A. Molster.

The biggest day in the history of Congressional Country Club will take place tomorrow when an all-day program will be held for some 500 golfing members.

An "early bird" tournament from 8 to 10 o'clock for the Robert P. Smith Cups will be followed by a mixed Scotch foursome event at 2:30. A driving contest will go on all day, while from 4 to 5 o'clock there will be a pitching and putting contest.

Prizes will be awarded the man and woman closest on the ninth with their tee shots, and prizes for birdies on No. 10 for men and pars for ladies on No. 2.

There will be an elaborate fashion show on the premenade at 5 o'clock. Swimming contests and tennis matches also are on the schedule. A dinner and dance will wind up the card.

Dr. Bob Keilty is in charge of arrangements.

Tom Kines, veteran municipal golfer, shot a 40-38—78 to win top honors in the Coast and Geodetic Survey Tournament yesterday at Indian Spring. John Don Rice, with a n 85 net, won the blind bogey.

Talking about golf power, Wiffy Cox drove the fifteenth green, a 320-yarder, yesterday at Kenwood and just missed hi seagle. On the thirteenth, 531 yards, he was over the green with his spoon second. The Kenwood pro finished with a hot 35-34—69.

Mrs. Jack Scott, of Kenwood, one-time Colorado State champion, plans to leave tomorrow for Denver, her former home, to play in the Trans-Mississippi Championship. Mrs. Scott once was president of the Trans-Mississippi Association.

Frank Williams played golf Monday in California, and yesterday flew home to shoot a 73 at Washington Golf and Country Club . . . Although Ralph Fowler did a 72 at Washington, his efforts and those of Lefty Harrell weren't good enough to beat Davey Thompson, pro, and Calvert (Hook and Slice) Dickey, who had a best ball of 68.

World Output Registers Rise During April

Spain Is an Exception to Wide Industrial Improvement.

New York, June 16.—World industrial production advanced during April, according to the monthly report of the National Industrial Conference Board. Output rose in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Sweden, Australia, Mexico, Chile and Peru. Production in France, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland and Japan showed little change over the preceding month. Business in Spain remained at a low level. Activity in Brazil was affected to some extent by severe drought in certain sections.

In the United Kingdom industry showed further expansion, although activity remained slightly below the record point reached in December, 1935. Operations in the iron, steel, and engineering industries continued at high levels. Improvement shown in the shipbuilding, automobile, and aircraft industries may be attributed in part to the re-armament program. In Japan the new government has introduced no radical changes, and business sentiment in the country is becoming more favorable. German industry continued to be supported, to a large extent, by public expenditures.

World prices of foodstuffs and raw materials advanced during April. Declines in wheat, coffee, silk and tin prices were more than offset by advances in sugar, tea cotton and rubber. The combined index of eight commodities stood at 68.6 per cent of the 1928 level. This figure compares with 67.6 per cent during March and represents an increase of about 118 per cent from June, 1932, the low point of the depression.

Wholesale commodity prices were substantially unchanged during April in the United States, Great Britain, Germany, Sweden, The Netherlands and Canada and declined in France. Preliminary reports for May indicate a decline in the general price level in the United States and Canada, and little change in Great Britain, France and Germany.

Security prices during May averaged lower in a majority of the leading markets. Substantial declines occurred on the London, Paris, Brussels, Vienna, Prague, Canadian, and New York exchanges. On June 6 the combined index of 11 leading markets was 3.1 per cent below the highest point for this year, reached on April 4.

Daily Oil Output Up 26,982 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., June 16 (AP).—An increase of 26,982 barrels daily in the Nation's production of oil for the week ended June 13 was reported today by the Oil and Gas Journal. Total daily production was 2,963,639.

In Oklahoma the production increased 19,800 to a total of 567,250 barrels daily while in East Texas the output decreased 6,799 barrels to 439,755 barrels daily.

The Market

Stocks Move Up Further in More Active Trading; Wheat and Cotton Advance.

New York, June 16.—Better prices were paid in most of the securities and commodities markets, with no marked tendency for dealings to expand. Bonds were quiet with firm prices. September wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 89⅝ cents a bushel. Cotton worked forward. Stocks opened with small gains, added to them in the late trading, and withstood profit taking in the last deals. Sales volume exceeded a million shares.

Early trading in stocks was conducted at a leisurely rate, but with a steadiness of tone that accompanied moderately higher prices for the steel stocks. Although no secret has been made of the fact that, with operations at recent rates, the leaders in the steel industry have been able to make profits for their owners, the estimates of common share earnings for United States Steel seem to have struck the market as a pleasant surprise. Moreover, the market enjoyed a little belated recognition of the fact that, in lieu of the usual decline in activity that takes place in June, the steel industry has somewhat strengthened its position at the highest rate in several years.

United States Steel climbed more than a point at its best. Youngstown rose about 2½ points, to a new high level. Republic, Bethlehem and National hardened. Motor shares were slow to respond to the steel example. Selling of Auburn put the price down a point or so, but support was found at the 30 level. General Motors opened with a loss of a fraction but climbed a little in the afternoon. Du Pont was more inclined to buoyancy. Airplane issues were shaken a little by a fall of a point in Douglas, which opened with a drop of a quarter.

Case Bounds Ahead.

Even in the early trading the store stocks were bid up on the popular supposition that much of the bonus cash will pour into retail store tills. Allied made a fresh high price. The prize performer of the early trading was Case, which shoved aside a rather slow farm implement group to go ahead 3 points to a new high price above 180. The action of Case suggested a neat speculative position for the bulls rather than any fresh arrival of good news.

Afternoon trading in stocks brought a mild flurry in the railroad shares and a firmer tone in the steels on increased turnover. For most stocks the best prices were reached in the last hour. Some of the rails, notably Santa Fe, Great Northern, Central, Pennsylvania and Southern Pacific, rose 1 to 2 points. Gulf States, an inactive issue, jumped 4 points on two sales.

National Power led the utility group. Consolidated Edison found the best prices since the current forward movement began and volume was large. Oils, amusements, rubbers, tobaccos and foods were merely firm. Silver shares weakened a little, but coppers were steady. Rail equipments were neglected. Motor accessories softened.

Utilities spurted in the last few minutes to lead the whole market up.

Independence of group members was not conspicious. Bon Ami recovered a little more. Atlas Tack sank to a new low on its first appearance. Woolworth was active and higher. Homestake dipped half a point into new low ground for the year at $469.50 a share. Most of the industrial leaders were steady to strong.

Taxes and Bonus.

Market followers utilized the breathing spell in politics to survey the prospects for a tax bill. Time is shortening for Congressional consideration, which is more unfavorable than otherwise, as the majority in Congress are on the side of the President and therefore are likely to vote blindly for whatever the leaders suggest. That pressure, it appears, will be made for a high levy on undistributed earnings. In any case corporations are in for higher taxes, but with the public debt daily reaching new and dizzy heights, only members of the ostrich family are counting on anything but greatly increased taxation.

Probably the sobering influence of new taxes to come took from the market some of the zip it might have felt from the bonus cash distribution. It has had ample time to discount that event, but a good deal of enthusiasm always is awakened by the publicity given such affairs and the actual sight of the spending of billions. Bearish considerations at least had no greater effect than holding back the tendency of prices to rise. Evidence of business improvement here and abroad is too convincing at this time for a bear market to make up.

The foreign currency position was unchanged. Francs remained at the gold point and shipments of the metal continued, giving rise to talk of fresh steps on the part of the Blum ministry to halt the little fellow, at least, from obtaining gold or removing his capital to other countries, after the example of the wealthy. Sterling, under the influence of the flight of funds from Paris and elsewhere, rose to a new high price on this movement.

Banking Position.

This week's condition statement of member banks of the Federal Reserve system shows no startling changes. A considerable fall in loans to brokers and dealers had been foreshadowed by the weekly brokers' loan report for last week. Demand deposits increased $97,000,000, now standing nearly two billions above a year ago, and holdings of Government bonds increased $66,000,000. The rise in bank investments is a natural accompaniment of the drop in loans. Virtually the sole outlet for bank funds now is the Government bond market, whenever loan demand declines.

Wheat Reacts On Realizing After 2c Rise

Prices Advance Despite Heavy Rains in Canadian Belt.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 16.—Right-about-face action of Chicago wheat prices late today more than overcame earlier downturns that resulted chiefly from drenching general rains in Canada.

After rising about 2 cents from early bottom levels, wheat reacted a little because of profit-taking at the last, and closed nervous, ¼-⅜ above yesterday's finish, July 88-88⅛, September 89½-⅝, December 91⅜-½, corn ⅛-½ up, July 62 ¼-⅜, September 59⅝-¾, December, 54⅝-¾, oats, ⅛-¼ advanced, September 26⅝, and rye also showing ⅛-¼ gain, September 58⅛. The outcome in provisions varied from unaltered figures to 15 cents higher.

Film President Fails to Hold Place on Board

John Otterson, Head of Paramount, Is Not Renominated.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 16.—John Otterson, president of Paramount Pictures, whose term as a director expired this year, was not renominated to the board at the annual meeting of stockholders today. Queried by a stockholder as to whether the failure to renominate him indicated his resignation from the presidency, Otterson said, "I think the election speaks for itself."

Following the meeting Otterson told reporters that he had not "formulated an opinion" as to whether or not he would continue as head of the corporation. He said the matter rested in the hands of directors who would meet in a few days for the customary election of officers. Trade circles said Otterson had an employment contract with Paramount at a compensation of $150,000 a year which still had four years to run.

Kennedy in Picture.

The company's affairs have been the subject of a study by Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who was retained for that purpose by directors. Kennedy's report was recently placed in the hands of directors but has not yet been made public.

Nominated to the board were Barey Balaban, of the theater chain of Balaban & Katz; Niel Agnew, vice president and general manager of Paramount; A. Conger Goodyear, president of the Museum of Modern Art; E. V. Richardson, head of the Saenger theater chain, and Paul McClintock, president of Sterling Products, Inc.

Sol Rogers, who said he represented a group of shareholders leveled a charge of inefficiency against the directors, and said those responsible for the recent reorganization of the corporation had dodged their responsibility by resigning.

Boston, Mass., June 16.—Candy sales reflect the condition of the family pocketbook. In April more candy was sold by our manufacturers than in any April since 1931, while in the first four months of this year sales exceeded the same 1935 months by 6½ per cent.

Fraser Succeeds Baker in U. S. Steel

New York, June 16 (AP).—George F. Baker, chairman of the First National Bank of New York, today resigned as a director of United States Steel Corporation, and was succeeded by Leon Fraser, vice president of the First National. Baker also was a member of the finance committee of the corporation, which post he likewise relinquished.

In taking over Baker's posts on the steel corporation, Fraser rounds out another leg in his career which started as a newspaper reporter. He was successively a teacher, lawyer, diplomatic and legal adviser and president of the Bank of International Settlements. From the latter post he resigned in February of this year to become vice president of the First National Bank of New York.

Bankers to Try Timing Offers To the Public

Morgan Stanley & Co. Will Wait for Favorable Market Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 16.—Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., wholesalers of securities, will try a new marketing device involving "timing" of public offerings, it was disclosed by the bankers today. By the "timing" method the bankers will hold the issue back more than the 20 days required by securities and exchange regulations in order to await advantageous bond market conditions.

This new system will be used in the banking concern's forthcoming flotation of $30,000,000 New York Edison Co., Inc., 3¼ per cent bonds. Under the securities and exchange regulations hitherto followed by issuing houses, procedure was as follows:

The bankers filed an "original" statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Twenty days then elapsed during which the loan could not be put on the market. A few days before this period ended, the bankers would file an "amendment" to the original statement giving the price, the coupon rate and other details. On the twentieth day the loan was free to be launched.

Sometimes, for legitimate causes, sale of the issue to the public had to be postponed when the twentieth day rolled around. On such occasions, the financial community, knowing the securities were to be offered on this day, was likely to place an unfavorable interpretation on the delay and consequently to turn a cold shoulder to the bonds when they finally appeared.

The effect of the proposed system, bankers pointed out, would be to eliminate from the minds of prospective buyers the firm expectation that securities registered with the SEC would make their appearance on the twentieth day, regardless of the market's readiness to absorb new bonds.

Sterling Advances To Two-Year High

By the Associated Press.

The pound sterling jumped to a new high since August 29, 1934, in New York foreign exchange dealings today.

Demand for the pound, prompted by continued political and labor unsettlement in France, pushed the currency up ⅜ of a cent to $5.04. In earlier London trading the dollar had closed at 5.03¾ to the pound.

New York dealings in the French franc found that unit up ⅛ to 6.58⅜ cents. This compared with an earlier Paris dollar rate equivalent to 6.583 cents to the franc. Other currencies were steady against the dollar.

After all . . .
Why doesn't someone suggest that VETERANS
keep their Bonus Money?
A Statement by F. D. AKERS

WITH so many "offers," "special deals" and other "spend-your-money-quick" propositions currently made to veterans, one wonders who is really going to get the bonus Congress voted; the veterans—or a lot of other people who are trying to make him spend it before he receives it.

Why doesn't someone suggest that the veterans keep their bonus, or at least part of it?

After all, the bonus which the average veteran will receive represents the hardest-earned money anybody ever got . . . money won at the expense of hardship, privation and, in many cases, serious risk to life itself. Certainly, thoughtful veterans will agree it should be used with the most judicious care.

That is how we feel about it.

CO-OPERATION WITH ANY VETERAN

Naturally, we do not want to discourage any prospective purchasers. We are in business to sell automobiles. But we emphatically do not want to lure buyers—particularly veterans to whom the whole Nation recognizes its obligation—into spending money that should be deposited with a savings bank as a safeguard for future emergencies.

However, to those veterans who feel convinced in their own minds that their bonus money will permit them to own a new or used car—we extend every sound convenience in making a purchase that any other motor company can extend.

In many instances we can do more.

AN INVITATION

We congratulate the veterans on receiving their bonus as a just reward for their sacrifices. And we invite those who—of their own accord—are now in the market for a car to discuss with us sound and convenient means of purchasing it.

Roosevelt High Graduates 350 At the Stadium

Ballou Presides at Capital's First Open Air Commencement.

In Washington's first open-air high school commencement, 350 graduates of Roosevelt High School were awarded diplomas at exercises yesterday afternoon in the school stadium.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, from a platform banked with evergreen and floral pieces, presided over the ceremonies, and Ernest Pullman, president of the P.-T. A. at the school, presented the diplomas.

The class of 240 girls and 110 boys marched into the stadium to the music of the High School Band, directed by Capt. Franklin Jackson. The girls were in white caps and gowns. The boys wore dark blue caps and gowns.

Several hundred parents and friends who would not have been able to gain admission to the 1,000-seat auditorium were in the stadium stands.

The graduates petitioned for the outdoor setting when advised that because of the large class each would receive only two tickets for an indoor commencement.

The Rev. Fred A. Cook, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Collingwood, Md., pronounced the invocation. Marian Elizabeth Freehafer was valedictorian. Miss Mary P. Bradshaw, assistant principal, presented the class, and Allan Davis, principal, announced winners of the awards.

62 at St. John's Graduate, Hear Dennis Connell

He Warns Class Against Compromising With Principles of Truth.

Success in life depends "not on your station in life, but on what you do," 62 graduates of St. John's College were warned by Dennis E. Connell, assistant to the chief economist of the Federal Trade Commission, at commencement exercises last night in Memorial Continental Hall.

"When you leave this school," Connell said, "you will be on your own. On your shoulders rests the decision—whether you will let honestly guide your thought and deed, or flattery and bribery."

Dishonest means may bring material gain, but never true success, the speaker declared. He urged the young graduates to show the same fair play in life that they have shown on the field of sports.

Reminding members of the class that they attended a school that makes moral principles clear, he advised, "There is no excuse for compromising with truth."

Brother E. Pius, provincial, presided over the ceremonies. Those who received diplomas are:

Anthony John Auth, Martin Julis Avingoe, jr., Paul Martin Bennett, Richard Dixon Brady, John Lyon Buckley, William Francis Cahill, Arsenio Cesedridi Calle, Robert John Cord, Thomas Joseph Costa, William Joseph Counselman, James Andrew Curtin, Edward Patrick Darsan, John Henry Dimond, John Francis Donohue, James Francis Doyd, Leo Aloysius Dunn, John Francis Ertler, jr., Thomas Leo Fox, Joseph Rudolph Franke, Francis Patrick Geoghegan, William Ralston Greenwald, jr., William Francis Hagan, Donald Ignatius Hamilton, Richard Edelen Hamilton, James Thomas Hartnett, John James Hassett, Donald Francis Heany, Joseph Ward Hutchinson, James Bernard Izoe, James Hampton Jones, William Emmanuel Lacey, jr., John Edward Landry, jr., Carlos Gustavus Larrasolo, jr., John Frederick Law, Albert William Litschgi, 3d, Joseph Leo Lynch, Joseph Francis McGrath, Joseph Ambrose Maloney, Louis Francis Mancini, Carl Eugene Martin, Joseph Francis Mickey, Robert Francis Miller, Carl Albert Poivinale, James Aloysius Pustisi, William Joseph Quinn, jr., Joseph Austin Ratigan, James Russell Rice, jr., Edgar Christopher Rich, Alexis Francis Rohan, Francis Clay Sheehy, Ferdinand Joseph Slagle, John Harrington Slaughter, Francis de Stanton, William Joseph Stanton, jr., James Edward Vozis, Charles Anthony Walker, Raymond Edward Walls, Joseph Charles White, Vincent DePaux Williams, John Chezney Wimsatt, Raymond Joseph Wise, jr., Norman John Ziehl.

Mrs. Bready received for the school a speaker's stand, presented by Sue Morsell for the ninth grade, and a radio for the faculty room, presented by Jane Reeder for the Ninth Grade Girls Club. Kin Sought Over Nation Found Here

Mrs. Mary E. Whiddon and her children, Peggy, 5, and Patsy, 2, were found here yesterday after a Nation-wide search since last January.

The 23-year-old mother was located in a house in the first block Eighth street southeast after police had arrested George Miller, 29, of the 600 block A street southeast, with whom she is alleged to have disappeared.

Miller was arrested in Hagerstown on the complaint of Robert Whiddon, husband of Mrs. Whiddon.

When first they began the search, the police followed the couple and the children to Pittsburgh, where all trace of them vanished. Several days ago they learned Miller was in Hagerstown. He was returned here Sunday night, and yesterday took the officers to Mrs. Whiddon's home.

Mrs. Whiddon will appear in the District attorney's office today.
